GASOLINE, HYDRO TAX PROPOSED

Gov't Sticks City To Share Bus Cost

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Victoria and Vancouver will be forced to share costs of their bus systems with the provincial government under legislation introduced today in the legislature.

The B.C. Urban Transit Authority Act, which sets up a Crown corporation to run urban transit throughout the province, gives Victoria and Vancouver authority to tax electricity bills and gasoline to help pay the added costs.

The new transit authority will take the operation of the buses out of the hands of B.C. Hydro when it is fully implemented in a year or two.

The province will participate in some of the cost of setting up and operating the municipal bus systems, but Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis indicated much of the burden will be borne by the municipalities.

The legislation provides for cities to increase property taxes, and Greater Victoria and Greater Vancouver will also be allowed to surcharge power bills and add three cents a gallon tax on gasoline.

Mayor Mike Young, who was at the legislature when the bill was introduced, said "the honeymoon has come to an end as far as Victoria's public transportation is concerned."

Young said it didn't appear to be good news for Victoria and Vancouver.

"They've been given a losing proposition."

Hydro's losses in transit are expected to reach $62 million in this fiscal year.

Young said he wonders if there will be an accompanying reduction in Hydro electricity rates once the corporation is rid of the transit operations.

Chairman of the Capital Region Jim Campbell said he's encouraged by the fact that transportation is put in the hands of local authorities, but whether the legislation is good or bad depends on the amount of the provincial contribution to the scheme.

Participation in the new authority is mandatory for Victoria and Vancouver. They cannot opt out, Curtis said.

The minister would not be more specific on the amount of the provincial contribution but he did say it will be "generous, responsible and ongoing."

Jetfoil Trial Proposed

Washington State Ferries wants, to operate a Boeing jetfoil service between Seattle and Victoria on a six-week trial basis starting in July.

Nevel Hunter, manager of marketing and service planning in Seattle, said today he is looking for suitable docking sites in Seattle and Victoria. The state's transport commission will have to approve the trial.

It is proposed to run two two-hour trips a day, one leaving Seattle at 9:30 a.m. and the other departing from Victoria at 2 p.m.

Proposed fares are $19 for a single trip and $35 for a return trip.

The jetfoil can carry 250 passengers.

FT. NELSON FOLK FAVOR ALTA. MOVE

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The majority of Fort Nelson residents polled in a recent Chamber of Commerce survey indicated they were so dissatisfied with services in British Columbia that they would consider joining Alberta, chamber president Len Shmelyck said Thursday.

The poll was originally taken to determine whether people would be willing to join Alberta if the B.C. Railway's Fort Nelson extension was shut down.

Shmelyck said about 75 per cent of the more than 100 replies received to date favor breaking away from B.C. because of the poor services provided by Prince George and Vancouver.

Bomb on Bus Kills Six

Times News Services

JERUSALEM — A bomb made from a mortar shell today killed six Israelis and wounded more than 20 others on a bus carrying Sabbath eve shoppers home.

Four persons were killed immediately and two more died in hospital. More than 20 were wounded, some of them critically, by the blast in a Jerusalem suburb.

The bomb was fashioned from an 81mm mortar shell, police said.

The Palestine Liberation Organization in Beirut issued a statement claiming responsibility for the bombing. The statement, distributed by the Palestinian news agency WAFA, did not say which guerrilla faction of the PLO carried out the attack.

The blast occurred shortly after 1 p.m. as the bus turned a corner into the affluent Bayit Vegan neighborhood of West Jerusalem, just opposite Yad Vashem, Israel's memorial to the six million Jewish victims of the Nazi holocaust.

The blast was so powerful it blew off the rear of the vehicle, curled up the roof and splintered the windshield of a bus following behind.

James Island Shutdown Shocker

Canadian Industries Ltd. will close its nitroglycerine dynamite manufacturing plant on James Island Sept. 30, laying off 96 men.

About six are elgible for early retirment but the remaining 90 are looking for new employment.

Union spokesman Larry Smith today said the closure is "a shock, a terrible shock."

He said rumors of a closure had been circulating for several months but workers had not expected it to come so soon.

"We knew the plant would close eventually but we didn't expect it would be this soon."

Smith said the Oil, Chemical, Atomic Workers International would meet with Canada Manpower and local employers in hopes of finding alternative jobs in the Greater Victoria area if possible.

"This has happened so quickly we have not had time to make any plans but we are getting on it right away."

James Island, off the east coast just south of Sidney, will be retained by CIL as an explosives distribution point and will employ about five people.

Works manager Grant Macpherson said the Island will go into a holding operation for some months, possibly several years, and then industrial activities may expand once again.

The problem, he said, is many mining companies are manufacturing slurry explosives at their mining sites.

This has cut sharply into the demand for nitroglycerine explosives, which are manufactured at James Island.

Some nitroglycerine dynamite will continue to be sold through James Island but it will come from large CIL plants in Ontario and Quebec. It will come across Canada by train and then by barge to James Island.

A CIL subsidiary, Continental Explosives Ltd., will operate on the Island, distributing the dynamite to customers. It will also manufacture ammonium nitrate-fuel oil explosives there but it will be a small operation.

Macpherson said CIL may begin manufacturing slurry explosives within a few years but the plant will be elsewhere in B.C. The explosives will be shipped to James Island, which may grow as a distribution centre.

The James Island explosives plant was founded in 1913. There had been a small community on the Island until 1962 when residents were moved to Sidney or Central Saanich.

The closure means the remaining employees may be permitted to live on James

French Program Ready

British Columbia's school districts were told Thursday they will be required to provide the core curriculum in the French language to all British Columbians who wish to be taught exclusively in French starting in September, 1979.

Education Minister Pat McGeer told the legislature the core curriculum in French, which he said is part of the government's policy to build national unity and the Canadian dream, is complete and now is available.

McGeer said that organization of the curriculum at the local level would be difficult, even though materials are available, so the districts would be asked during the coming year to implement the core curriculum where numbers warrant.

"We're going to give them a year of shaking down and organization and then we're going to say — a year from September — you must in your district provide it if the numbers are there asking for it," McGeer said.

McGeer said his ministry is putting emphasis on scholarship, attendance, development of programs for the gifted, decreasing vandalism and improved articulation between secondary and post-secondary institutions.

Greater Victoria school board vice-chairman Pete Dorazio said today McGeer's plan to implement the French core curriculum on demand will have little effect in this district.

"It's a good idea, it's timely; but it will have no significant impact on the system because the demand will not be great," he said.

Canada Expells U.S. Trollers

Times News Services

OTTAWA — United States fishing vessels must be out of Canadian waters by Sunday noon because the government has reached the conclusion a satisfactory fisheries agreement with the U.S. cannot be implemented, External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson said today.

Jamieson told the Commons he had informed the U.S. ambassador, Thomas Enders, the closure was the most "appropriate means of maintaining a balance between the fishing interests of the two nations."

It may not, however, be possible to get all U.S. fishing vessels out of Canadian waters by the deadline, an official of the U.S. National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said.

Carmen Blondin, deputy director, international fisheries affairs, said in a Washington interview that communications problems may make a speedy withdrawal of fishing boats difficult.

Blondin said there are about 20 U.S. vessels now in Canadian waters off the east coast and 30 to 40 off the west coast.

He said that although the U.S. would do whatever it could to meet Ottawa's deadline, Sunday is "rather short notice."

"We had hoped there would be a longer period involved," he said. "I frankly doubt that this (meeting the deadline) will be possible."

Blondin, a former coast guard officer, said it often takes considerable time to contact all boats and inform them of withdrawals. And once they are all notified, they still have to sail home.

He added that he expects Canada will recall its fishing boats now in U.S. waters and estimated that at any time there are between 50 and 150 Canadian salmon trollers operating off the U.S. west coast.

Youth On The Move

At last, a travel column geared primarily to the needs of young people!

Lucy Izon is a 24-year-old Canadian writer who has travelled many parts of the world and has applied her training as a media researcher to dig up just about everything people want to know about how to go and what to do when they get there.

She has backpacked across Canada and done Japan on a shoestring among other things, so she knows what most young people want to see, recognizing that they usually don't have too much money to spend.

Lucy's column, Youth on the Move, appears in today's Times on page 33 and will be a regular Friday feature in the Times' Family section. (Today's column could be a lifesaver; it's about what to do in an emergency if you need money from home).

Incidentally, a lot of older readers will enjoy Youth on the Move. Particularly if they are young at heart and eager not to spend a lot of money on their travels.

Socreds Rake NDP On Report

The Social Credit government insisted Thursday the NDP has jeopardized a favorable fishing-boundary agreement despite the fact the "secret" paper it revealed was made public four months ago.

Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf — speaking for Premier Bill Bennett who refused to see reporters — said that when negotiations resume in a month or so, B.C. may not be invited back.

Negotiations were suspended in March with the U.S. and Canada at loggerheads in their attempt to hammer out new fishing boundaries now that both nations have declared 200-mile offshore limits.

Bawlf, the minister responsible for fisheries, said that when B.C. presented its position paper a year ago, it was warned by Ottawa to keep the contents secret or risk losing a place at the negotiating table.

But it was revealed Thursday the position paper was made public in late January at the annual convention of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union in Vancouver.

The entire content of the paper was reported in Vancouver newspapers at the time of the UFAWU convention.

When asked if it wasn't really the UFAWU that should bear the brunt of the government's anger, not the NDP, Bawlf said the situation was different.

The UFAWU was "told the error of their ways," but the government didn't make a big fuss of it because it didn't

Police Strike Vote on Monday

The decision came Thursday following the police board rejection of a union proposal in which members offered to take a decrease in pay if the cost-of-living drops during the two-year term of a new contract.

Union president Phil Jamieson said today the proposal was made to show members aren't trying to gouge anyone in their insistence that cost-of-living allowances be applied to salary levels at the conclusion of the contract.

Mayor Mel Couvelier, however, has said any job action would be illegal until mediator Clark Gilmore has completed his report.

Problems over the new contract arose on May 24 with the union charged the board was reneging on a promise to tack COLA adjustments on to salary rates. The two sides had already reached agreement on a new contract May 12.

But board chairman Mayor Mel Couvelier said today no such promise had ever made in the negotiations.

Couvelier suggested Jamieson misinterpreted the agreement to union members and is now embarrassed as a result.

"That's complete hogwash," Jamieson replied.

"It wasn't me the union members took a 100 per cent vote of non-confidence in," he said referring to a membership vote taken last week censuring Couvelier's handling of the negotiations.

Jamieson said he doesn't know what needs to be done to resolve the complex issue. One option, he said, would be to renegotiate the entire contract.

Couvelier said if the union wants to start from scratch in negotiating a new contract "it would probably suit us too."

VETERANS' HIKE PASSES IN LESS THAN ONE HOUR

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons spent less than an hour Thurday approving legislation to increase disabled veteran pensions by up to $310 a year effective July 1.

The speedy passage followed all-party agreement to proceed with the bill which was introduced last week by Veterans Affairs Minister Dan MacDonald.

The bill increases pensions for totally disabled veterans to $7,471 a year from $7,160. This increase is in addition to automatic raises tied to consumer price increases.

The government last week refused opposition offers to pass the bill immediately, saying it did not want to interrupt second-reading debate of its controversial sales tax measures.

Alaster Baker, Progressive Conservative House leader, offered Thursday to pass the bill in one hour next week during a day set aside for debate on subjects chosen by the opposition.

Baker and Stanley Knowles, New Democratic House leader, accused the government of holding veterans up for ransom in order to push through other bills.

Yvon Pinard, deputy government House leader, then announced the bill would be proceeded with immediately if there was all-party agreement to pass it in one hour.

The bill will also raise pensions of former prisoners of war to $7,471 a year from $7,160. Widows pensions will be raised to $5,603 annually from $5,370.

Plant Closing Shock

Island for the first time since 1962.

In 1971 CIL sold James Island to a subsidiary, Canadian Freehold Properties Ltd., which made a study of the residential potential there.

But in 1976 CIL bought the island back, saying it would be retained for a long time for industrial purposes. It appears its industrial purpose will be mainly as a distribution centre.

John D'Eath of Canadian Freehold said the island is mainly sand and no residential development could take place until water supplies are available by pipes. The wells on the island produce little water and it is of poor quality.

Meanwhile, Macpherson said the company hopes to be able to provide work for some of the emlployees in other CIL plants but this study is just beginning and the total number might be small.

He said six of the 96 have the necessary qualifications for pension (at least 55 years old and 26 years of service). The rest will be looking for work.

James Island is an unorganized territory but many of the employees live in Central Saanich. Mayor Jean Butler said the closure was a serious economic blow but was not totally unexpected.

City to Be Forced To Pay Bus Costs

The new legislation will set up an eight-member Urban Transit Authority which in turn will establish at least three regional commissions — the Capital Region Transit Commission, the Lower Mainland Transit Commission, and The Small Community Transit Commission.

Members on the main board will be appointed by cabinet, but to qualify they must be elected municipal or regional representatives.

The authority will report to government through a committee of cabinet ministers which will approve budget and policy.

The transit commissions, also composed of elected officials, will negotiate transit agreements with local governments of at least five years' duration.

The commissions will work out operating agreements and participate in setting up routes, fares and costs.

Curtis told a press conference Bill 19 removes a double taxation that exists in communities which not only support a local transit system, but also subsidize Victoria and Vancouver's transit losses through their electricity bills.

B.C. Hydro will continue to operate the bus systems until a new bus company is established under the jurisdiction of the transit authority.

That won't happen until at least into the next fiscal year — after April 1, 1979, Curtis said.

When asked how much it would cost to purchase the buses from B.C. Hydro and who would pay for it, Curtis said those are details that will have to be worked out in the coming year. But he said he didn't think it would be an area to cause much concern, that he expects to work out a good deal with Hydro.

"In times of concern over diminishing energy supplies particularly relative to fossil fuel, this legislation confirms B.C.'s commitment to public passenger transport, and establishes a mechanism to ensure its efficient growth and effective management in response to locally determined needs," Curtis said.

The minister added that it's always a difficult problem but there has to be a balance struck between building more freeways and operating more public transit.

Terrorists Kill Wife, Miss Envoy

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Three terrorists believed to be Armenian vengeance-seekers pumped bullets into the windshield of the Turkish ambassador's limousine at a stoplight in downtown Madrid today, killing his wife, brother-in-law and a chauffeur, police said.

The ambassador, Zeki Kuneralp, was in the nearby embassy when three young men, all dressed in jeans, opened up with pistols on his beige Mercedes, which was bound for the Prado museum.

The terrorists fired from a car, believed to be a red Ford Fiesta, and sped from the scene on foot, witnesses said. Eight empty shells were found nearby, they said.

The envoy's wife, Nekla, was dead on arrival at a Madrid hospital and the body of his brother-in-law was not removed from the bullet-riddled limousine for more than an hour. Police did not say why.

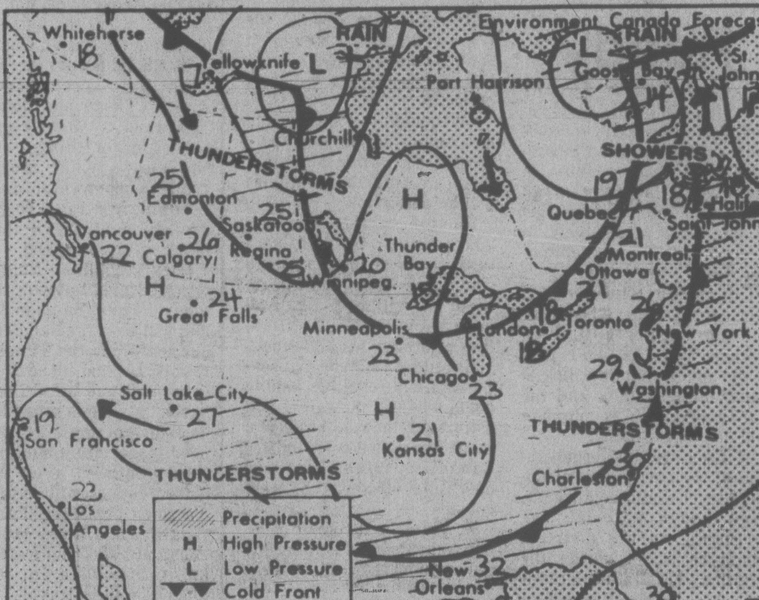

Map valid until noon Saturday

Another sunny and warm day is in the offing as a massive ridge of high pressure continues to hold firm over the province. Temperatures will once again climb into the 20s at most stations and a few Interior stations will likely see the mercury soar into the low 30s. Fine weather is anticipated for B.C. throughout the weekend with the ridge holding Pacific weather disturbances well off the coast.

CAPE TOWN (AP) — The South African government has reprieved about 27,500 seals scheduled to be killed in the next five years on Seal Island, in False Bay near Cape Town.

The seals are thinned out to keep them from depleting the fish supply. The government cancelled a four-year grant of the killing rights after claims by opponents of the killing that there was no proof Seal Island is overpopulated.

Soviets Spying Down Chimney

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials, after discovering sophisticated electronic spy equipment in a chimney of the Moscow embassy, are assessing the damage it did to U.S. security and puzzling over how the gadgetry works.

One official called the Soviet Union's use of the espionage equipment a "serious penetration of our embassy," but said the electronic gear will have to be analysed before deciding whether it has caused a major security breech.

The official, who asked not to be named, said the equipment was apparently maintained by Russians technicians who sneaked into the embassy by crawling through a tunnel, which originated in a nearby apartment building, and then climbed up the chimney.

In Moscow, an embassy source said the cable leading from the device was traced to a room in the nearby building where a Soviet agent was discovered before a bank of equipment, monitoring signals from the bug. He fled when U.S. officials entered, said the source, who asked not to be named.

The discovery of the device also raised questions about the equipment's possible link to other mysteries involving the Moscow embassy—such as why the Russians have beamed microwaves at the building for years, worrying U.S. officials about possible health hazards.

The chimney is adjacent to the embassy's South Wing, which houses junior employees and does not have a high security rating, but U.S. diplomats were concerned that the bugging equipment might have been monitoring the neighboring Central Wing. That section houses the highly sensitive offices of Ambassador Malcolm Toon.

Since the discovery of the bug, embassy officials have reinforced their marine security guard on the building's roof and at a point along the tunnel in case the Russians realized their system no longer was secure, said the embassy source.

The source said a cat-and-mouse game involving the tunnel began with U.S. officials removing a brick from its wall at night only to find it replaced the following morning.

Thomas Reston, the state department's associate spokesman, said Thursday the device was discovered May 25 and that a protest was lodged with the Soviet foreign ministry.

However, another official said the electronic gear—including a large antenna—was discovered during a routine security search.

"There was regular physical penetration of the embassy by Soviets without the knowledge of the United States," the official said. "They would come through the tunnel and up the chimney."

Although the exact nature of the equipment was not known, the official said it apparently was not limited to eavesdropping devices.

"We're still trying to figure this puzzle out," the official said. "We're doing a technical assessment of the problem right now. But it might take some time to determine precisely how it (the equipment) works."

The official said there is likely a connection between the equipment and the low-level microwaves that the Russians have beamed at the embassy.

Pressure Mounts On EPA

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Environmental Protection Agency is coming under increasing pressure from President Carter's economic advisers and the Department of Energy to relax key air pollution control requirements it has proposed because of their potential inflationary impact.

The pressure on the EPA appears to reflect a growing concern on the part of some Carter administration members that the inflationary effect of federal regulatory efforts is doing more damage to the nation than their environmental impact is doing good.

"There seems to be a different set of priorities coming up with inflation elevated to a much higher status of concern than it was six months ago," a senior EPA official said this week.

The president's inflation advisers have also detained issuance of a new Occupational Safety and Health Administration standard to reduce exposure to lung-damaging cotton dust among textile workers, prompting a strong appeal on OSHA's behalf from Labor Secretary Ray Marshall to the president.

SPONTANEOUS SONG

OTTAWA (CP) — MPs of all parties burst into a spontaneous rendition of God Save the Queen in the Commons today on the 25th anniversary of Queen Elizabeth's coronation.

After the Commons unanimously adopted a resolution by Conservative Lloyd Crouse (South Shore) extending warmest wishes to the Queen, MPs stood and began singing.

Commons Speaker James Jerome looked somewhat startled, but adjusted his robes and stood at attention until the singing was finished.

He Had His Chance

Dig beneath the bombast and wild language of New Democratic Party leader Dave Barrett on the subject of the Columbia River treaty and you still have to conclude that the man is right — the B.C. Hydro power and flood control dams on the Columbia cost British Columbians vastly more than they were told they would cost a decade ago.

The Social Credit party exaggerated the benefits to British Columbia of the Columbia River treaty, and continues to exaggerate them. The truth is we were done in, skinned, skunked by the more knowledgeable, better-prepared and tenacious Americans. We signed away downstream benefits, that is, flood control protection for Americans lower down the river, for a low, one-time flat payment.

W.A.C. Bennett stated many times that B.C. was getting "free" electricity in return for building three dams on the Columbia, that U.S. payments of $501 million would more than pay for the construction costs of the dams and associated facilities.

The present finance minister, Evan Wolfe, told the B.C. legislature on Monday that the loss to B.C. on the Columbia project was $124 million. He said that NDP claims that the actual cost to the province was at least $1 billion confuse what the treaty was and was not intended to pay for, and that generators, transmission lines and transformers and such like were never to be paid for out of treaty money.

Funny. We recall no such caveat from Wolfe's predecessor of the 1960s. "Nothing is freer than free," said W.A.C. Bennett, in a memorable speech describing the cornucopia of benefits that would flow from the free power generated on the Columbia.

Now the Social Credit administration of his son is forced to own up to a loss of at least $124 million on the dams alone, exclusive of generating facilities and transmission lines. Some free power.

But Barrett and his NDP colleagues are fine ones to talk of deception and a major fiscal cover-up.

They had their chance to investigate the true costs of the Columbia project, and they passed it up. They have no right to cry foul at this late stage.

In February, 1975 then NDP resources minister Bob Williams made some startling revelations about the Columbia dams. He claimed that a secret committee at Hydro worked for two years to hide the true costs of the Columbia dams among other provincial budget items.

Naturally, Williams' allegations created a tremendous furore. Former Hydro co-chairman Hugh Keenleyside, who supervised the Columbia project, defended his record. Social Crediters from W.A.C. Bennett on down denied any impropriety. Williams pledged 10 days after his initial shocker that "the government . . . has determined that an inquiry into the question of Columbia River costs and their allocations should be undertaken . . . terms of reference of that inquiry will be announced in due course."

But that was the last word anyone in Barrett's government ever said about an inquiry to get to the bottom of the Columbia fiasco. The NDP remained in power for another nine months, but nothing followed Williams' terse announcement to the legislature. No royal commission was established. No special inquiry. Not even an in-house investigation. Why?

Without much convincing evidence to the contrary, one must assume Williams' claims had little basis in fact. But that hasn't prevented various New Democrats from trotting out the issue every so often.

Barrett has kept his outrage fresh and warm for three years. Judging from his rhetoric ("coverup of a major fiscal disaster — a political fiasco of the first order"), perhaps he still plans an independent investigation of the Columbia River project. If unsubstantiated charges stop drawing headlines, he may resort to a little sober fact-finding. One day. Maybe.

The burning question still remains: why didn't he go ahead and find out what happened when he had the chance, when with the stroke of a pen he could have endowed an inquisitive royal commission, named whomever he wished to dig into the scandals, provided a few million dollars and intelligent, apolitical research staff for the task? The answer must wait for the historian who may read the premier's papers and cabinet minutes of the day and plumb the contemporary political rationale.

In the here and now, however, Barrett's actions suggest that NDP wrath over the Columbia is as easily turned on and off as the water that flows over the Mica dam spillway.

Chord of C for Crazy

The legislature concentrates its energies on Health Minister Bob McClelland's compulsory Heroin Treatment Act, opponents attacking it for its violation of civil liberties and the constitution, supporters suggesting it is the first positive step towards eradicating this social cancer.

While the act's central tenet — forcible incarceration in a treatment centre without prior conviction of any crime — has drawn the closest scrutiny, less attention has been paid to exactly how drug addicts are to be weaned from their drugs.

The act defines treatment as "direction, supervision, or treatment of a person for the purpose of terminating or diminishing his use of or dependency on a narcotic," but it does not state what the treatment will consist of. The minister has said little since announcing the plan last summer.

Partial enlightenment, at least, is at hand. Ray Cohen, the civil servant in McClelland's department who drew up the act, says part of the program will be free guitar lessons for junkies who promise to stay away from their old drug haunts.

For the unmusical, jogging is offered.

French Turn to Business

MONTREAL — Over the last seven years there has been a dramatic reversal in the attitudes of French-speaking Quebecers toward the business world.

Young francophones are now flocking to business schools in record numbers. The left-wing, anti-business sentiment once prevalent on Quebec college campuses is waning.

Anglophone employers are now aware of the need to recruit French-speaking business graduates. And a new dialogue has begun with company presidents venturing into the classrooms and francophone students serving apprenticeships in large corporations.

Last year, the province of Quebec accounted for more than one-third of all business school graduates across Canada, and the growth rate is faster in the French universities than in the English ones.

Feel Wanted

Pierre Laurin, director of the University of Montreal's business school, says young francophones now feel they are wanted in the business world, and are more confident about their chances of getting a job.

"I think there is also a certain backlash among young people against the dogmatic, classical education they received in which material things were not valued," he says.

While the proportion of francophones in top management positions has not increased substantially in the last few years, Laurin says the number of francophones entering the market will ensure a "normal" distribution within 10 years.

He has advised companies to hire groups of francophones at the same time, to ease their transition into an environment where they do not always feel at home.

"Everything is changing. Companies are now approaching the language question systematically like any other management problem and are designing systems to get around the problem."

For example Steinberg, the giant Quebec retail chain, has developed a management trainee program for young francophones so that they can begin their careers in senior positions.

The University of Montreal business school has developed a "systematic relationship" with the anglophone business community, Laurin says. Students are exposed to the workings of a company so they can see first hand what business problems would interest them.

There is also more information on business and finance in the Quebec news media than ever before.

And while there is still some traditional reluctance on the part of some young francophones to enter business, Laurin says "I try to convince my students that it's worth a try."

To date, the banks have made the most progress in hiring francophones to senior management positions. "Because banks are so close to the public, we're ahead of other businesses," says Andre Bisson, vice-president of the Bank of Nova Scotia.

"Banks are interwoven with what is going on in society and if we don't adapt, we will suffer."

Bisson says the Bank of Nova Scotia is now a leader in the hiring of francophones, but it wasn't always that way.

After the 1970 October Crisis of political kidnappings and murder, the bank's directors realized the company had been out of touch with events in Quebec and had not hired enough francophones.

They started at the top. Bisson was hired in 1971, becoming the bank's first francophone vice-president in charge of Québec operations. A commitment was made to recruit as many French-Canadians as possible.

Today, the Quebec head-office functions in both languages. Ninety-two per cent of senior management is bilingual. Of these, 80 per cent are francophone, an increase of 30 per cent in the last seven years.

"The events of the '60s and '70s have given a sense of confidence to young Quebecers," says Bisson. "They no longer have an inferiority complex because they realize we are sincere in our efforts to hire more than just token francophones."

Rather Go Abroad

Attracted by the prospects of work abroad in an international organization like the Bank of Nova Scotia, francophone business graduates are showing "enormous interest" in applying. But Bisson notes that almost all Quebec francophones would rather work abroad than be transferred elsewhere in Canada, "because they fear hostility against francophones and a lack of French schools in other provinces."

But Bisson notes that greater acceptance in English business circles now means that 50 per cent of new members joining Montreal's blue-chip St. James Club are francophones. "When I joined 10 years ago, we were only 20 out of 1,000."

Bisson stresses that "language is no substitute for competence" and says there will always be places in the bank for anglophones "as long as they are bilingual."

But he says that companies which do not hire a "normal proportion" of francophones are courting trouble.

New Pearl Harbor?

It is interesting to note how a worried world clamors for a disarmament conference. I see no reason for the western countries to attend. All Moscow says to bring peace to this world, the west will have to disarm and we oblige.

The B-1 bomber was ditched. The reason? An irksome weapon. The cruise missile endangers SALT talks. These same bandits say the neutron bomb is the product of a savage race.

Our prime minister thought it best to suffocate our nuclear defence system as it might rile the Russians. We must always remember this boast; the day the Western world trades with us will be their downfall, and when they drop their guard, we'll smash them.

The Kremlin is scheming to introduce the bear hug as the universal embrace. These bragging reds have long ago planned our burial, and the only man to stand up to Kruschev on this point, while on his visit to the U.S. was the mayor of Los Angeles. The Kremlin is waiting for a weak U.S. President plus a self-disarmed west, to Pearl Harbor us, and we are nearing that hour. — J. A. Gessner, 2201 Henry Avenue, Sidney.

Women Not at Fault

I'm instructed by the Victoria Labor Council to say that it is most concerned over the degree of public advocacy for the proposition that the country's high unemployment is due to the large number of married women who hold down paid jobs in the labor force.

This proposition we reject completely, believing that all Canadians, both men and women, have a right to free choice of employment and to just and favorable conditions of work.

The attack on women is not only based on misconceptions, but is a negative approach to a problem that demands a positive approach. Part of the positive approach, we believe, should be made by government in the creation of employment opportunities. — L. Ryan, Secretary-Treasurer, Victoria Labor Council.

Kids and Guns

This week the United Nations is discussing world disarmament. On CBC radio, this past Sunday, the noted Dr. William Epstein stated that most world-watchers agree that unless there is a dramatic change in public awareness, and public apathy, there will be a nuclear war somewhere in the world within 10 years.

And in Victoria? With grim irony, we have Armed Forces Day during the disarmament discussions, to rev up the kiddies to arm for peace. And to top it all off, we have your juicy, giant picture on page 9 of the Monday Times showing a couple of children riding an armored vehicle, fresh from the "front," and sighting down their killing-sticks with looks of immense glee.

I have seen much discussion in your paper about pornography, four-letter words, etc. But your publication of that picture — just stare at it and think, folks! — was the ultimate obscenity. — D. K. Edwards, 584 Victoria Avenue.

Bad Drivers

A loud Amen to the gentleman who brought up the subject of our morals being in a tailspin in Max Low's column of May 24. Mr. Wagner has certainly echoed my sentiments about Victoria drivers. I have lived in five major metropolitan areas in Canada and have visited and driven in cities from coast to coast. Victoria drivers, on the whole, exhibit a marked lack of courtesy. I have never seen so many cars go through red lights than I have since I came to Victoria almost two years ago. — Reed H. Elley, 1730 Carrick Street.

Who Now?

Who do we vote for now? Surely Joe Clark can't believe we would vote for him after his approval of Trudeau's plan to entrench French language in the courts? Why is he taking from Canadians their last chance to reverse the policies of the French-dominated government? Know now that the people's revolt in this country will be laid not only against the Liberals, but against the Conservatives who lacked the guts to protect the rights of the majority of Canadians!

The renewed fight of the French to gain victory over their loss on the Plains of Abraham, is a new, subtle, insidious and dangerous psychological war that contains elements more destructive than bullets. Does Clark really think that the quiet trusting Canadians are going to continue to sit passively and allow the fractious French to take over this country? English Canadians, once their trust has been betrayed, will fight, and once the fight starts, their tenacity to win will override all other considerations.

I would advise Mr. Clark to go across the country and listen carefully to the people he is supposed to represent, or it will be too late. — M. Kennedy, R.R. 6, Metchosin.

Spoiled on Ferries

Your editorial Real Brass (May 24) points out that all travel on B.C. Ferries is subsidized by taxpayers. True, and in principle, wrong. The fares are absurdly low by world standards. Let those who protest that try travelling in Europe! We are spoiled, those of us who live in the two large cities. We need to expand the public ferry service to more communities and resorts up the coast. We can only do this if the service is economic. That an expansion is necessary is very apparent to people who travel to the many islands and communities up the coast which rely on private ferries (water taxis). Some of these operators are now charging up to 10 times the B.C. Ferry Corp. rate per mile, effectively holding some communities to ransom.

Expansion of the ferry service is essential to our tourist industry, and this merits a subsidy of reasonable proportions. I suggest that the government allow travel agents in other countries and provinces to sell, in advance, "tourist ferry passes" at perhaps the present low rate we all pay. We must let the government know that this province needs a viable, expanding public ferry service, with adequate facilities on board, serving more tourists and more communities. The novelist R.F. Delderfield was right when he said that the history of man's development was determined by his transportation facilities. — W.A.G. Voss, 100 King George Terrace.

How Long?

Occasionally we hear pessimistic comments to the effect that Canada could not survive if Quebec separates. I can only wonder how a person reaches such an erratic conclusion. There must be political bias involved.

Surely the strength of Ontario through to British Columbia is immense, both in natural resources and business ability, and there is no sensible reason why those provinces could not work together to build a strong and united nation, actually with fewer problems than we now have. The position of the Maritime provinces would have to be worked out but a solution could certainly be found.

It might simplify our thinking if we ask ourselves two questions: 1. What help is Quebec to the country now? 2. What drawbacks are the English provinces encountering because of Quebec and her continuing demands? The huge expense of the bilingual policy (which has largely failed) and the disunity it has fostered are two points of consideration. And yet Quebecers are far from satisfied.

At this point in our history, the province of Quebec wants all the advantages of Confederation but none of the drawbacks. Is there any hope of a fair and reasonable solution on this basis? How long must this upheaval continue? — F. I. Monette, Pointe Claire, Que.

Good Singers

A recent Sunday service at St. Andrews Presbyterian Church was enlivened by a local group of young singers and musicians called The Light of the World Community Singers.

As they belted out their songs of praise, they really "turned me on", something I can assure you all the Beatles and the Presley types have never been able to do.

My observations of the reaction of the congregation indicated their enjoyment as they cheerfully joined the choir with a tempo and type of singing different from our normal singing of songs of praise.

With all due respect and affection to our regular choir may I suggest to Rev. Bruce Molloy that another invitation in the not too distant future be extended to The Light of the World Community Singers, who I feel the ministerial association could use to advantage in their outreach to the youth of our city.

Their enthusiasm, smiling faces and rhythmical presentation is contagious; at least surprisingly it has infected me to some extent.

If they make a recording please let me know.—K. R. Burns, 401-640 Dallas Road.

The Despairing Voice of Black Australia

A Queensland Aborigine fashioning boomerang

By PETER DEELEY

SYDNEY — Driving through the lush tropical rain forests that fringe Australia's Pacific Highway, I stopped to help an Aboriginal family whose ancient car had broken down.

The head of the family accepted my offer of a lift to the nearest garage with less alacrity than I had expected from a motorist stranded 50 miles from the nearest point of civilization.

He sat beside me saying nothing, but clearly troubled. I started to talk about inconsequential matters to break the ice and it was then that he took the plunge. "You from Queensland?" he asked with a frown. "Why are you stopping for me?"

His questions unlocked the riddle. I had a hire car which bore the number plates of the Queensland "Sunshine State": I was white and apparently middle-class and prosperous, so why was I bothering to help an "Abo"?

When I explained that I was a British journalist, living in Sydney and going to Queensland to cover a story, he relaxed marginally. But the barrier could never be completely removed: Queensland remains a symbol of ill-treatment and deprivation for a people who have good cause to be suspicious and resentful of the white "interlopers."

Kevin Gilbert, a part-Aboriginal who served 14 years in jail for the murder of his white wife and who has since become a noted playwright and speaker, has written a striking account of the dilemma that faces his people today as they struggle to come to terms with the white man's society.

In his latest book, Living Black, Gilbert says: "Our people, psychologically, are like kangaroos sitting on a bush road at night unable to move when the spotlight hits them. They just sit there waiting for it."

The book consists of a series of interviews with urban and tribal Aboriginals living on reserves and fringe settlements. They are the voices of black Australia, as rarely heard before, telling of life in a society that, says Gilbert, "despises their existence and their culture, that stereotypes them as 'dirty, lazy, bludging (scrounging), alcoholic' and colonizes them in their own land."

Modern Aboriginals, Gilbert maintains, are victims of a chain of historical events reaching back to the European invasion of the Australian continent 200 years ago.

"Aboriginal Australia underwent a rape of the soul so profound that the blight continues in the minds of most blacks today. It is this psychological blight, more than anything else, that causes the conditions that we see on reserves and missions."

Gilbert believes that Aboriginals must change their sorry state by their own efforts, including radical reeducation of themselves and by themselves. "We know that a white Australian will never do it," he stresses. He cites the fact that while black Australian children can name American Indian heroes and tribes, "ask them to name an Aboriginal hero or tribe and they will not be able to do so because Aboriginal history is either unknown or negative."

Gilbert says that when the first Labour government in two decades came to power in 1972 under Gough Whitlam, there was a "first glimmer of hope in the crippled Aboriginal communities." Whitlam's actions were proof that at last white Australia had thrown up a leader worthy of all the communities.

But Labour is now out of power, Whitlam has stepped down and Gilbert has this to say of the present prime minister, Malcolm Fraser, head of the conservative Liberal-National Party coalition government: "He attacks apartheid and butchery in Uganda. He gives warnings of blood-baths unless the tyrannical rule of Ian Smith is ended quickly and peacefully. He demands majority black rule for Zimbabwe and Namibia. He describes John Vorster and Ian Smith as 'scourges' to human dignity.

"He pledges money for overseas aid, harangues the world's rich to meet their responsibility to the poor — while back home in Australia, in his own electorate of Wannon, there are several thousand Aborigines living below the poverty line, without adequate housing and health facilities."

Gilbert concludes that in the streets of white Australia today, a "very clear message" is being rammed home: Aboriginals have lost their freedom. "For 200 years we have been subjected to death, abuse and denial of dignity and basic human rights by the white usurpers of our land. Today, we are the products of the ravages of white settlements."

U.S. Lacks Carrot or Stick to Impose its Will on Cuba

By JOHN M. GOSHKO
The Washington Post

A few months ago the Carter administration, in a public listing of its achievements, pointed with particular pride to two foreign policy "breakthroughs" — the Panama Canal treaties and the move toward improved ties with Cuba.

Now, no one talks any longer about an impending "new era" in U.S.-Cuban relations. When administration officials discuss Fidel Castro's Cuba these days it's in tones ringing with frustration and anger.

Prompting the shift has been Washington's mounting concern about Cuba's role as the alleged military proxy of the Soviet Union in Africa. That continent currently seems unable to have an armed conflict without Cuban soldiers and technicians — more than 30,000, according to administration estimates — lurking in the background or taking part openly in the fighting.

The situation has prompted a lot of talk — in Congress, in the press, even in some quarters of the administration — about the need to get tough with Castro. According to this argument, the way to combat Soviet influence in Africa is to apply pressures against Cuba that will force Castro to bring his soldiers home.

However, such talk doesn't arouse much enthusiasm among U.S. officials familiar with Cuba. Within the administration they are privately trying to make a case that the United States simply doesn't have much leverage that can be brought to bear against Cuba. Because of the high political sensitivity of the internal administration debate on Cuba these officials were reluctant to be identified. They are arguing, though, that Castro has what he regards as very compelling pragmatic and ideological reasons for his involvement in Afrcia.

When these are weighed against Washington's biggest potential counter-pressure — a breaking off of the movement toward normal relations — there's no question of which choice the Cuban president will make.

The most obvious consideration involves Castro's continued dependence on Soviet aid and financial support to keep the economy of his small island country on keel. Moscow put more than $1.7 billion into Cuba during 1977, and its contributions this year will exceed $2 billion.

CASTRO

CARTER
. . . frustrated

At a time when the world market price for Cuba's major commodity, sugar, is roughly 8 cents a pound, the Soviet Union buys the bulk of the Cuban sugar crop at 30 cents a pound. Similarly, while other small countries are strangling financially in the escalating cost of paying for petroleum imports, Moscow supplies all of Cuba's oil needs at prices far below the going free market rate.

In contrast, the only economic advantage that Cuba could gain from normal relations with Washington would be an increase in U.S.-Cuban trade. But, as the Cubans like to point out, the biggest advantage would go to the United States, which would be selling expensive technology and finished products while buying relatively cheap Cuban raw materials.

What once loomed as the potentially biggest lure of increased trade — the chance for Cuba to get back a piece of the lucrative U.S. sugar market — has lost a lot of its attraction for the Cubans.

Under an international sugar agreement that soon will go into effect, Cuba will gain a quota giving its greater access for its sugar in Europe and elsewhere. As a result, it will no longer have to think exclusively in terms of the United States as the market for the sugar that the Soviets don't buy.

The Cubans readily admit that improved U.S. ties would give them some cash advantages, principally in the sale of Cuban metal exports and a potential rise in U.S. tourist traffic. But, they also note, these gains would still be only a small factor in the statistics of the Cuban economy, which is now tied inextricably to the Soviet Union and its communist-bloc allies.

Nor are cash considerations the only reason for Havana's involvement in Africa. Most experts on Cuba believe it is a serious mistake to assume that Castro is simply using his soldiers and technicians as mercenaries for hire to Moscow.

Although Cuba is probably the most ideologically inconsistent and undisciplined Marxist country anywhere, there is one belief from which the Castro government has never swerved over the years.

That's the mystical conviction that Cuba, which was transformed into a communist state through guerrilla warfare, has an obligation to support "wars of liberation" throughout the Third World.

This emphasis on exporting revolution has been perhaps the biggest factor in making Castro a major figure on the world stage. It was personified by his most famous collaborator, the late Ernesto "Che" Guevara, and a number of leftist ideologues like the French theoretican, Regis Debray, who have attempted to give it the dimensions of a distinct movement within world Marxism.

During the 1960s, the major thrust of Cuba's foreign military adventures was directed at aiding guerrilla movements in Latin America. That period reached its symbolic end a decade ago with the death of Guevara and the abortive failure of his expedition in Bolivia.

For a long time, the Cubans put their interest in foreign revolutions on the back burner. That was due partly to Castro's preoccupation with domestic problems and partly to pressures that Moscow, in a detente tradeoff with Washington, exerted to keep him out of Latin America.

However, even in the days of Guevara, there was a lot of talk in Cuba about Africa being the most potentially fertile ground for revolution. Guevara and others used to make speeches and write articles about Cuba, with its strong African heritage, being the logical teacher and ally of African guerrilla movements.

Many U.S. sources say these attitudes are so ingrained in the Cuban government's thought processes that Castro probably would have become a willing partner of the Soviets in Africa even without any economic inducements.

And, the sources add, if Washington has no carrot to counter the economic advantages offered by the Soviets, it also lacks a stick sufficient to beat back the Cubans' ideological fervor.

As one State Department source sums it up: "We can't attack Cuba. We can't blockade Cuba. We can't even enforce an embargo on trade or muster the votes to keep Cuba out of the Organization of American States any longer. So what do we do? Threaten them with a resumption of U-2 overflights?"

A Matter of Memory

By ROGER ROSENBLATT
Washington Post

Among my several endearing social traits is the inability to remember names and faces. People to whom I've been reintroduced 20 or 30 times regard this as a sign of hostility to life, and deeply they may be right. They do not regard it as a compensating virtue that I can recite from memory the closing lines of Tennyson's Ulysses and seven Gaelic curse in Gaelic. Nor do they see it as a reversal of values that while they always unfailingly remember my insignificant name, not one can recite a single Gaelic curse.

Fact is that the art of memorization is a lost one, one that no modern educator — and very few sensible people, as well — seem eager to retrieve. The emphasis in education these days is on forced creativity. Learning by rote is considered constrictive to the imagination. In my judgment, however, the act of memorization actually frees the imagination. Of course, it depends on what you memorize.

The first line I ever committed to memory was the one given me for a third grade French play: "Pardonnez-moi, Madame, mais cette soupe est delicieuse." I haven't found many uses for the line since; but taking it into my little head and letting it rest alongside other third grade debris, started me off collecting passages of prose and poetry, but which have served me as a corps of dignified friends on whom I can rely without continually having to prove it. Coleridge once spent a whole evening with Wordsworth in which neither said a word, at the end each thanking the other for a wonderful visit. That's how I think of those memorized passages.

More of Wordsworth in a moment, but first let me try to defend my faith in memorization:

- Memorization increases understanding. For one thing, memorized passages occur to us at different times for different reasons — each occasion bringing its own definition of the passage, thus lighting the occasion and the passage differently each time. For another, reciting a memorized passage is great exercise in deductive reasoning. The passage is the answer, ready-made; and experience the evidence.

- Memorization heightens language. Letting one's language keep good company is a way of setting standards. Mark Twain said, "The difference between the word and the right word is the difference between the lightning bug and the lightning." In the best minds the lightning bug strives for the lightning.

- Memorization enlarges the capacity for feeling. Why else would the term be defined as learning "by heart"? If the brain alone were engaged in the process, the words wouldn't stick. Everything we memorize we either love at the start, or come to love.

- Memorization sweetens revenge — as is illustrated by the following anecdote:

If you remember, it can make for sweet revenge

During the year I was preparing for my Ph.D., oral exams, I was also teaching a section of a survey course in English literature, which I would deliberately gear toward the stuff I was reading for my orals. When it came time to do Wordsworth, I taught my class "Lines Composed a Few Miles Above Tintern Abby," the first 57 lines of which I memorized. The recitation of those lines made a big hit with the class (many of whom took drugs and were easily pleased), and I was satisfied. After that I let Wordsworth's lines lie with the "Pardonnez-moi" line and the Gaelic curses.

When it came time for my orals, I accompanied a friend whose orals were slotted for the same time as mine, though in an adjacent room. So undistinguished a graduate student was I that a professor congratulated me for having the goodness to give my friend moral support — a professor who happened to be on my own examining committee.

At least he showed up, as did one other. But the third member of the committee did not show up. He had simply forgotten about my orals — the orals for which I had sweated a year — and the exam had to begin with only two-thirds of the committee present.

Next door, through the wall, I could hear my friend chatting amiably with his examiners, good-natured collegial laughter wafting throughout the English department. I, on the other side, was droning on about Blake, my two examiners fending off great clouds of sleep, dreaming of suicide, thinking — I was sure — that if the third of their number did not show up, they would have to get a substitute. But where?

That question frightened me, too, but for a different reason. A professor emeritus with a reputation for asking questions on orals such as "Mr. X, would you please list fifty of Anthony Trollope's novels in alphabetical order?" had just entered the building. I heard him greeted downstairs. My fear was that, lacking the third examiner, my two companions would enlist the professor, who would gladly oblige, lick his chops and begin, "Mr. Rosenblatt, have you heard of Anthony Trollope?"

Just as (I believe) that solution had occured to the pair before me, the original third examiner bounded into the room — flushed, sputtering, dressed in tennis togs and apologizing all around. He apologized more ardently to his colleagues than to me, since the colleagues were his seniors. Then, wishing to get right in the swim of things, he asked: "Well, where are we?"

"Wordsworth," answered the chairman.

"Ah, Wordsworth," sighed the newcomer. "Mr. Rosenblatt," he said with a lilt, heading for a chair. "Do you happen to know how 'Lines Composed a Few Miles Above Tintern Abbey' begins?"

Before he was fully seated, I let him have 57 lines between the eyes.

Public Trial for Treu Demanded by Baldwin

OTTAWA (CP) — Charging that a grave miscarriage of justice has occurred, Alberta Conservative MP Gerald Baldwin asked the government Thursday to seek a new trial for Alexander Peter Treu, convicted last month after a secret trial in Montreal.

Treu, 56, was sentenced to two years in prison following the trial in which he was convicted of two violations of the Official Secrets Act in his handling of NATO defence information.

Baldwin made the request in the Commons during debate on his claim that Yves Mayrand, acting chief sessions court judge, is trying to intimidate MPs by stating, among other things, that an independent judiciary cannot tolerate the kind of criticism Baldwin has made about the secret trial.

Commons Speaker James Jerome reserved a decision on the claim by the MP for Peace River that Mayrand has violated parliamentary privileges. The speaker also said he could avoid making a ruling if MPs would unanimously agree to refer the matter to a Commons committee for examination.

After reserving his right to propose a formal motion pending Jerome's ruling, Baldwin said "I am prepared to relinquish the rights I have in observance of the belief that we might secure a measure of justice for a man who . . . seems at the moment, according to the limited facts we have, to have been the subject of a grave miscarriage of justice."

Baldwin also asked Justice Minister Ron Basford to get legal counsel to ask the appeal courts to quash Treu's conviction and two-year prison sentence and order a new trial, this one to be held in public.

"I resent the right of any judge to tell me I have no right to criticize the way in which a trial was conducted," Baldwin said.

Stanley Knowles, New Democratic Party house leader, and other Opposition MPs agreed with Baldwin during debate on the issue but Basford said he would oppose any attempts to summon Mayrand before the Commons committee.

Prefacing his remarks with the declaration "I am not here to defend a judge," Basford said one could argue Mayrand's statements were unwise but claiming they are threatening or intimidating is going too far.

"In no way can it affect the rights and privileges of this House," Basford said.

Heart Surgey For Laskin

TORONTO (CP) — Chief Justice Bora Laskin of the Supreme Court of Canada was in satisfactory condition Thursday after undergoing open-heart surgery at Toronto Western Hospital, a hospital spokesman said.

The spokesman said the operation on the 65-year-old chief justice, admitted to hospital May 19, was a coronary artery bypass.

He said Mr. Justice Laskin was in the intensive care unit and would remain in hospital several more weeks.

4 UNION LEADERS GO TO JAIL

MONTREAL (CP) — Four veteran union officials gave themselves up Thursday to begin serving jail sentences for their part in an illegal 43-day strike by city transit maintenance workers in 1974.

The four — former union president Jacques Beaudoin, former treasurer Jacques Thibault, former business agent Pierre Arnault and current president Jacques Morissette — arrived at the main courthouse and were transfered to Bordeaux jail.

Beaudoin will serve 90 days while his colleagues were given 60-day terms for contempt of court. Chief Justice Jules Deschenes held them responsible for the fact that transit maintenance workers disobeyed an injunction ordering them to end their strike.

Beaudoin could be paroled after 60 days while the other three could get out after 44.

In a final public appearance Wednesday, the four turned up at a demonstration outside the downtown headquarters of Hydro-Quebec where Premier Rene Leveque's Montreal office is located.

The demonstration, which attracted several hundred supporters, was organized by the Confederation of National Trade Unions (CNTU), the independent labor federation to which the transit union belongs.

New Quebec Refusal No Shock to Chretien

OTTAWA (CP) — The Quebec government rejected new federal proposals to end the sales tax dispute between the two governments Thursday night, but Finance Minister Jean Chretien showed few signs of surprise or regret.

The minister arrived beaming at an evening news conference and told reporters he had proved to his critics in Parliament and in Quebec how flexible he could be. As he had suspected, the Parti Quebecois government was not interested in his offer.

"Now maybe Canadians will see who we are dealing with. I know them (the Parti Quebecois) and they have only one goal — to destroy my country."

Quebec Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau had just finished announcing in the national assembly that the federal offers were unacceptable. He called them absurd, bizarre and said they interfered with provincial rights.

In spite of Parizeau's refusal, Chretien indicated he might use part of his new package in Quebec, with or without provincial agreement.

Chretien proposed two solutions to the sales tax dispute at a news conference earlier in the day. Sources said he knew, even then, that Quebec had rejected them, but said nothing and continued with his announcements.

Chretien called it the first Ryan formula because it was advanced by Quebec Liberal Leader Claude Ryan last week.

Under this system, the federal government would reduce the income tax of each Quebec tax payer by $100 in 1978 rather than sticking to Chretien's original plan of sending each tax payer an $85 rebate on his 1977 return.

Chretien said Thursday night he may decide to impose the $100 reduction in 1978 whether Parizeau accepts the proposal or not.

$38,000 Games Loss Seen

EDMONTON (CP) — Budget forecasters for the Commonwealth Games Foundation are predicting that their final budget for the Games will be $17 million.

Treasurer Bob Losie said in a news release Thursday that this would leave the foundation with a debt of $38,000.

But Losie said the final figure, which also includes the foundation's $3.5-million share of Games' construction costs, could swing either way, depending on how many tickets and souvenirs are sold and other factors, such as donations and unexpected costs.

Record Lack Cited

TORONTO (CP) — A Crown witness in a dredging conspiracy trial was told by a defence lawyer Thursday that there were no bank records to back up his claim that he was told by a senior officer of his company to arrange a bank loan for a dredging contract.

Robert Schneider, former vice-president and general manager of Canadian Dredge and Dock Co. Ltd., was told by the lawyer representing Hugh Martin, former chairman of the company, that he had lost his memory.

The lawyer, Douglas Laidlaw, said the meetings over several years that Schneider had been testifying about really involved different people and different times and places.

"That is absolutely ridiculous," Schneider replied.

Schneider has been testifying for the last three days in the trial of 11 men and nine companies charged with defrauding public agencies of more than $4 million by rigging dredging bids.

In testimony on previous days, he has told an Ontario Supreme Court jury that Martin told him in 1973 to try to negotiate a bank loan so Canadian Dredge and Dock could buy the equipment it would need for a legitimate bid on a Toronto contract.

He testified that he had one or two unsatisfactory meetings with a bank official, but said Martin was satisfied with the eventual outcome after learning that Canadian Dredge and Dock would still get a subcontract through an illegal bid.

But Laidlaw told Schneider that there were no bank records to back up his claim that he had met bank officials to negotiate the loan.

Hospital Sued In Death

SHERBROOKE, Que. (CP) — A hospital here is being sued for $429,559 following the death of a 51-year-old man on its operating table last fall.

Edith Crawford-Clark, of nearby Lennoxville, says in a suit filed in Superior Court Thursday the University of Sherbrooke Hospital is responsible for the death of her husband Eugene because of faulty equipment.

He was admitted to hospital in mid-September suffering from cardiac problems, and a coronary by-pass operation was performed Oct. 4.

However, the suit says, during the operation Clark was deprived of oxygen for about 20 minutes. An electroencephalograph test three days later confirmed his brain had ceased.

Mrs. Crawford-Clark, who is left with five children, says that after the operation cardiac surgeon Dr. Gilles Raymond told her a machine had malfunctioned and that doctors had tried to give her husband oxygen by mechanical means.

Socred Opinion

Walter Davidson (SC—Delta) says he didn't have the resources to conduct a completely random survey of opinion on the government's planned heroin treatment program — so he sent his 3,000 questionnaires to Social Credit party members.

Davidson said in an interview he expects to find an 85 per cent response in favor of the program, and will turn the results over to Health Minister Bob McClelland, who introduced the plan in the legislature Monday.

Laurel Point joins in the Bicentennial Celebrations

if we'd been here when Captain Cook came calling
. . . he might have stayed!

Too bad for the good Captain that Laurel Point wasn't ready then—but lucky for you we are now. In fact, more than two-thirds of the original Laurel Point units are sold—which means if you'd like a front-row-centre seat on the Bicentennial celebrations on or about the Inner Harbour this summer—the time to get to the Point is now!

Talk it over with the Laurel Point team this week; they're skilled, friendly realtors with a wealth of experience, and reserves of information about financing, house trades and more.

Gov't Seeking Probe Of 4 MLAs' Status

The B.C. government moved Thursday to reconstitute a legislative committee to decide if four members of the B.C. legislature — including two cabinet ministers — are sitting legally.

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy presented a motion which would authorize the formation of the committee to decide if Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt, Recreation Minister Sam Bawlf, George Kerster (SC—Coquitlam) and Len Bawtree (SC—Shuswap) were disqualified from sitting because they had received government funds.

A similar committee was set up last year but expired with the last session of the legislature after being boycotted by the opposition parties who said they feared a whitewash.

The motion to reconstitute the committee did not get approval, and will now appear on the order paper for debate on or after Monday.

NDP House Leader Bill King failed to get the government to agree to allow an equal number of opposition and government members on the committee.

It would be required to sit immediately and report to the legislature before the end of the session, and would be authorized and required to allow representations of any persons by counsel on examination and cross-examination of witnesses.

The New Democratic Party accused Hewitt, Bawlf and Kerster last summer of being in contravention of the Constitution Act by allowing the government to pay their expenses while serving on a special housing committee.

The housing department paid $546 for travel and accommodation for Bawlf, $680 for Hewitt and $514 for Kerster.

Bawtree said he might be in contravention of the act because he received $2,000 in government funds for ranch improvements.

He said he had applied for the funds under the Grazing Act in November, 1974, before he was elected to the legislature, but did not get the money until November, 1976.

Scott Wallace, then Progressive Conservative leader, said he was in possible contravention of the act by accepting $192 for expenses while serving on the steering committee of the B.C. Conference on the Family during 1976.

Wallace took the matter to the B.C. Supreme Court which ruled that it was up to the legislature to decide.

Mrs. McCarthy said Wallace was not included on the list because he is no longer an MLA.

Baby Sale Racket Feared

Former attorney-general Alex Macdonald called on the B.C. government Thursday to amend the Adoptions Act to prevent the sale of babies.

Macdonald said in an interview this would prevent mothers "expecting children, who are usually unmarried and young, looking around for the highest bidder for their child."

In the legislature, Macdonald said a lawyer in Vancouver offers pre-natal and post-natal financial help to a mother who might surrender her expected child for adoption by his client.

He told Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm this could lead to a situation of babies for sale rather than the orderly placement through an agency of his department after proper counselling as to the best interests of the child and mother.

COUPONS CLIP SHOPPERS - MLA

Discount coupons hurt consumers more than help them, two opposition members of the legislature told Consumer Affairs Minister Rafe Mair Thursday.

"The question is, 'who is getting clipped?' " said Liberal leader Gordon Gibson. "The answer is the consumers, not the coupons."

Barbara Wallace (NDP—Cowichan-Malahat) said abuse of coupons is getting out of hand and called on Mair to bring in regulations to control it.

Mair, speaking during debate of his budgetary estimates, said his ministry is studying the problem. The province has a Trading Stamps Act, but coupons don't fall under its jurisdiction.

Gibson said coupons lead to higher prices and are a general nuisance.

Mrs. Wallace said the business of "cents-off" coupons is a multi-million dollar industry.

She said coupons have been abused by producers, distributors and supermarkets. For example, when the Anti-Inflation Board ordered some companies to return excess profits to consumers, the companies did so in an unfair manner by issuing coupons.

On other matters, Mair said he is not satisfied with existing securities legislation and said his ministry is working to consolidate and update it.

Rosemary Brown (NDP—Vancouver-Burrard) asked Mair to change the Residential Tenancy Act so landlords couldn't evict a couple if they had a child. Mair said he has already instructed his staff to look into the matter.

Gibson asked Mair to press for a more equitable federal tariff system, something which costs every person in B.C. $500 a year, he said.

Get Tough With Weeds

Everything has its place.

But unwanted weeds and grasses have no place on your patio, down the side of your driveway, along a fence line or along your sidewalk.

So get tough with WEEDRITE®.

This unique, granular weedkiller is dissolved in water and applied with a watering can. It kills all unwanted green growth on contact. It can also be safely used around trees, shrubs and ornamentals, as it has no effect on mature brown bark and is completely deactivated on contact with the soil.

WEEDRITE grass and weed control.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — News of a drop in the money supply provided the impetus for a moderate advance in stock prices.

At the close on Thursday the Federal Reserve Board listed a $1 billion decline in the basic measure of the money supply.

The Board has been attempting to curb inflation by pushing up short-term interest rates in order to discourage rapid monetary growth.

Brokers said the latest figures heightened hopes that the effort was succeeding, and that the Board might not feel the need to push interest rates much higher.

Meanwhile, the U.S. government reported this morning that wholesale prices of finished goods rose 0.7 per cent in May, compared with a 1.3 per cent surge the month before. That also tended to reinforce hopes that recent inflationary pressures might soon subside.

Reliance Group led the active list, up 1½ to $33⅞. The company said 4.90 million of its warrants to buy the stock at $32.07 a share had been exercised by the close of business Thursday.

Any of the rest of the approximately 6.52 million warrants not exercised today are scheduled to expire this weekend.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices were broadly higher in moderate trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange. Royal Bank climbed ½ to $32¼, Brascan A ⅛ to $16¾, Moore Corp. ⅞ to $37½, Bell Canada ⅜ to $58⅝ and TransCanada PipeLines ⅛ to $15¼. Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce slipped ¼ to $28⅝. Among speculative issues, Stanford Mines rose two cents to 57 cents.

London

LONDON (CP) — The London stock market was moderately lower near the close of light trading. The Financial Times index was down 3.9 to 474.3 an hour before the close. Leading equities drifted after rising above early low levels, while gold issues erased opening declines following a recovery in the bullion price. Canadian stocks eased.

Goodyear Wins Tire Battle

DETROIT (AP) — Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. has won a corporate battle with General Motors Corp. (GM) over Goodyear's controversial new elliptic tire.

The tire, which GM claims is unsafe, won federal approval Tuesday and can be sold in the United States starting Monday.

Also approved by the U.S. National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) was a similar tire by French-owned Michelin, already slated for introduction on some 1979 Ford Motor Co. models.

The elliptic, so named for its squat cross-section, can increase gasoline mileage at 80 kilometres an hour by up to four per cent over steel-belted radials, Goodyear claims. The biggest tire maker called it a revolutionary development.

While Ford and Chrysler Corp. lined up in favor of the tire, GM said it doesn't save fuel as Goodyear claimed and could be unsafe because it needs special rims.

The tire inadvertently could be mounted on conventional rims at a service station or repair shop, posing a safety threat, GM argued. The automaker named 21 potential combinations of mismatched tires and rims and petitioned NHTSA to delay approval of the tire for at least a year.

But Goodyear, Ford and Chrysler said the elliptic was impossible to mount on the wrong rims and thus was no safety hazard.

The elliptic sidewall curves more than ordinary tires and absorbs some bumps instead of transmitting them to the car. That means it can carry more air, thus reducing rolling resistance while avoiding the harsh ride normally associated with highly inflated tires.

Michelin's TRX was actually the first elliptic tire developed and is already sold in Europe. A trade magazine says Goodyear "barely skirted the Michelin patents" in developing its own elliptic.

Royal Bank Sets Major Upheaval

MONTREAL (CP) — The Royal Bank of Canada is facing a divisional reorganization in the fall "designed to get better productivity and better efficiency out of the combination of people which we now have," says Robert Utting, the bank's chief operating officer.

A major part of the reorganization is the creation of a new division to handle major corporate financial needs—the national accounts division.

Headed by John McMillan, former chief of the corporate banking division, national accounts will assign specific people to specific acounts, Utting said in a recent interview.

Corporate accounts have been dealing with a branch where the management group covers a wide range of accounts, Utting explained.

"An assistant manager is all things to all people. He may or may not have possessed all the skills that we believe are necessary for major financing of major corporations.

"It's come through loud and clear that as corporations get larger and more complex, they want to deal with someone who has a pretty good grasp of what they need."

Part of what they need is the expertise to put together project financing which is a package of financing pulled together from a great variety of available sources secured by the worth of the project rather than by the credit of its sponsors.

Project financing is tailored to requirements of large-scale undertakings.

The new division takes corporations away from the branches "only in a specific way," he added. "National accounts will address themselves to that market which is clearly identified as having that specialized need and the remainder of our business will then all come under the Canada division."

The importance of the bank's branch network is recognized in the merging of corporate banking and administration with the Canada division.

"Because we are a branch operation and a very large number of our people is attached to the branch operation, the total administration of that should be in one place," Utting explained.

While the reorganization of the Canada division will cut down on recruitment, there will be no cuts in existing personnel—just "reassignments and realignments."

The reorganization also recognizes the economic importance of the west through the appointment of a third vice-chairman who is based in Calgary.

Hal Wyatt, former head of the Canada division, will provide Western Canada with "a direct voice in top management, it will no longer have to come up through the system and that, far and away, is the greatest significance of the appointment.

"You can say that a vice-chairman in an area like that has a hig profile in banking, government and business."

The other two vice-chairmen are Jock Finlayson, based here, and Douglas Gardiner, based in Toronto.

Utting himself is new to the job. He was transferred in January from London, where he directed the European operations, to take over the day-to-day operations of the bank.

Coming here "doesn't bother" the executive who has been transferred here twice before—a quiet period politically 1958-60 and a turbulent one, 1968-73.

NEB Hearing 'Not Needed'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jack Nichol, president of the 7,000-member United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, said Thursday the National Energy Board hearings here are unnecessary in view of the federal government's action in dispensing earlier with the West Coast Oil Ports Inquiry.

Nichol said it was wrong for the government to order the NEB to investigate Canada's energy needs and the feasibility of a West Coast oil port after a federal cabinet spokesman had stated there was no need for an oil port now or in the near future.

Nichol was referring to a statement by Environment Minister Len Marchand who said the government had decided to cancel the West Coast Oil Ports Inquiry, conducted by Dr. Andrew Thompson earlier this year, in view of the lack of demand for a port.

Nichol said the government had "taken something away from the people of B.C. when it cancelled the Thompson inquiry—the opportunity to express their concern about a West Coast oil port."

NEB chairman, J. G. Stabback, said the public had been given every opportunity by the board to comment on the subject.

Nichol's made the remarks after he read into the hearings record a submission from a Prince Rupert environmentalist group called Save Our Shores, which complained about the lack of funding available to groups to appear before the hearings.

Nichol said the NEB has been ordered to consider the possible location and timing of a West Coast oil port, but has not been ordered to consider its impact on the marine environment.

"It seems to us the oil ports inquiry should have continued to look at the subject," he said.

BOSS NURSES AT VGH FIRED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three senior nursing directors at Vancouver General Hospital were fired Thursday in the latest round of a dispute between nurses and the hospital's administration over internal communications and nursing procedures.

They were fired by Dorothy Babcock, acting director of nursing, when they said they couldn't agree with the new administrative structure and methods of communication with hospital management.

Dismissed are Win Miller, clinical director of psychiatric nursing; Lorea Ytterberg, clinical director of medical nursing; and June Nakamoto, clinical director of obstetrics and gynecology. All have declined comment.

Earlier this year, Bonnie Lantz, clinical director of surgical nursing, was also fired for her dispute with management.

The nursing directors are part of a group of nurses who have criticized VGH for inadequate communication between nurses and management, inadequate nursing staff, updating and orientation courses, and acceptance of modern nursing practices.

VGH president Larry Truitt said he doesn't expect patient care to be affected by the firings and that nurses in various sections of the hospital will continue as usual while an independent and analytical nursing-manpower report is prepared.

Orenda Heads Out

VANCOUVER (CP) — Geordie Tocher's 12.6-metre dugout canoe Orenda has weathered its first storm and has headed out into the Pacific Ocean on a 3,600-kilometre voyage to Hawaii.

Tocher and his crew of two left here May 14 and spent the following two weeks on a cruise to Seattle and other ports on the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

The other crew members are navigator Gerhard Kiesel, 56, and Karin Lind, 34, an anthropology teacher.

Le Car is here.

At last, an economy car that doesn't economize on fun.

Unlike a lot of small cars, Le Car's a ball to drive. Rather than a bore.

Which is why in Europe, where driving is as much a passion as a means of transportation, there are more Le Cars on the road than Rabbits and Fiestas combined.

A lot of things contribute to Le Car's fun. Like a combination of standard features you won't find on Rabbit or Civic. Including front wheel drive, rack and pinion steering, torsion bar suspension and Michelin steel-belted radials. All of which aid performance. There's even an optional sun roof, so big we call it a Fun Roof.

Le Car doesn't economize on comfort either.

Le Car has an extra long wheelbase to provide an extra smooth ride.

And it comes with the most comfortable seats this side of your living room.

For an extra measure of comfort Le Car gives you more front and rear headroom than Rabbit and Civic. Even a wider hatch.

Yet Le Car slips into parking spaces they'd have to pass up.

In fact, the only thing Le Car economizes on is gas. Getting 57 mpg (92 km/g) on the highway,* and 40 mpg (64 km/g) in the city.*

Test drive one at your nearest Renault dealer soon. You'll realize for all its fun, Le Car is one small car you should seriously consider.

Le Fun Offer

We believe that if you drive Le Car, you'll like it. So we're offering a free "Le Car Freak" T-Shirt if you test drive Le Car before June 30, 1978.

Guy's Parting Shot

VANCOUVER (CP) — Len Guy, one of the most visible labor leaders in British Columbia, retired Thursday, going out the same way he came in—"fighting for the working class."

Guy, who served five years as the secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Federation of Labor, directed a parting shot at Dennis McDermott, president of the Canadian Labor Congress.

McDermott said in Toronto earlier in the week that the 32-hour, four-day work week—a resolution adopted in April by the CLC—is impractical because it would place Canadians in an extremely uncompetitive position in trade relationships.

"There just doesn't appear to be any consideration any more for the considerable number of unemployed or the disastrous results if that situation is not turned around," Guy said.

"This resolution passed the convention. It is CLC policy. McDermott should be driving it."

The 55-year-old former printer has earned his share of enemies by using the same tough approach on affiliates of the federation.

"His style of operation was abrasive and blunt," says Jim Kinnaird, president of the B.C.-Yukon Building and Construction Trades Council. "That rubbed people the wrong way."

Guy makes no apologies for his personal style.

"I have just been naturally Len Guy and if I was angry that federation policies were being violated, I let people know it."

Despite the critics, Guy's tough-guy approach has worked on employers and government at the bargaining table—an area where "we work under the greed system."

Trustee Named

VANCOUVER (CP) — Creditors met with bankrupt businessman Mons Kapoor Wednesday and approved the appointment of bankruptcy trustee R. E. Jamieson of the accounting firm Rose, Gale and Co.

Kapoor claims $500 worth of assets, saying that his only source of income is expense money he draws as general manager of Image Restaurants Ltd.

ANTI-TOURIST CAMPAIGN 'FLOP'

TRAIL (CP) — A publicity campaign by striking civic workers to discourage tourists from visiting this southwestern British Columbia city has not been successful, says Mayor Chuck Lakes.

Although the workers, members of Local 2087 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE), have been on strike since Feb. 16, Lakes said Wednesday that "there hasn't been a problem with garbage because citizens are dumping their own garbage at the entrance to the city garbage site."

Lakes said the city has stationed supervisory staff at the garbage site entrance to remove the garbage and take it into the refuse site.

Kim Catalano, Chamber of Commerce president, said it is difficult to tell if the union campaign is working because "the real tourist season hasn't hit us yet."

He said he isn't aware of the extent of the CUPE workers' campaign to discourage tourists as all he has heard are rumors.

A spokesman for the Downtown Merchants Association said he believes the strikers have been hurt by the campaign and they've received no sympathy.

FOOD CARTEL OPPOSED

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States has no intention of participating with Canada and other countries in a proposed international food cartel, a spokesman for Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland said Thursday.

The spokesman said in an interview that Bergland opposes any food marketing arrangement which might turn food into "a political football."

He was commenting on statements made Wednesday by Eugene Whelan, Canadian agriculture minister, that support is growing for an international agricultural producers organization.

Whelan said he has been "flying kites" in an attempt to get response to the proposed organization.

No Defence Hikes - PM

OTTAWA (FP) — Prime Minister Trudeau bluntly told the Commons Thursday there is no Canadian plan to increase spending above this country's expanded defence budget announced two years ago.

The prime minister was making his first appearance in the House after attending the NATO summit conference in Washington where the partner nations pledged to increase their defence spending into the 1990s by three per cent a year.

Cost of the new NATO arms program is about $80 billion, with the United States' share a little over half the total.

Trideau refused to make a policy statement to the Commons on the NATO meetings concerning increased defence spending, or on the fact that Canada wants no part in the Paris meeting of western powers to discuss Soviet and Cuban intervention in Africa.

Opposition Leader Joe Clark pressed the prime minister to tell the MPs if supplementary estimates would be introduced to provide for the increased defence spending as a result of the commitments made at the NATO meetings.

Clark said the proposed $100 million, or 2.8 per cent in real terms, of defence spending already decided for the current fiscal year was designed to replace equipment in the armed force. It was not a result of the latest decisions by the NATO nations.

The prime minister disagreed. He said the opposition leader was wrong in stating that money spent by the government on national defence is not for NATO purposes. He said many of the commitments made to NATO will be followed up through the government's defence spending.

Council Draws Line On Causeway Food

A prospective hotdog stand operator got his buns kicked Thursday when he asked City Hall for permission to operate his business on the Inner Harbor causeway this summer.

Victoria council's business licensing committee has approved a number of applications to hawk food on the causeway recently, but now feels the fast food menu is long enough.

"I think we've gone far enough with the causeway," said Ald. Robin Blencoe who moved that no more food sellers be allowed on the Government St. causeway.

Mayor Mike Young supported the move and W.P. Comerford's plans for a hotdog cart were rejected.

Because of past apporvals by the committee, however, summer strollers will be able to buy ice cream, Polish sausages and sauteed clams, among other things.

SAANICH SUPERINTENDENT

Saanich has become the first school district to use the provincial education ministry's new guidelines for hiring superintendents.

Acting independently of the ministry, the Saanich school board selected new school superintendent Donald R. Smyth from a list of 12 applicants.

Under the old provincial procedure superintendents are appointed by the ministry from the civil service, then sent to school districts around the province.

Districts with a population exceeding 20,000 are given a short list of applicants and allowed to help in the selection.

But the new rules give school boards the authority to handle the whole procedure themselves. Next year the regulations will be further altered to allow anyone in the province the opportunity to become a school superintendent.

Smyth, 49, is now a superintendent in the Cariboo-Chilcotin school district.

Three Years for Killing Bull, Seducing Girl, 14

A Central Saanich farm hand, convicted of having sexual intercourse with an under-age girl and wilfully killing her Highland bull, was sentenced in Victoria county court Thursday to three years in the B.C. Penitentiary.

Donald Harry Schultz, 41, was sentenced by Judge Leslie Cashman to three years for the sex offence with a 14-year-old girl between July 1 and Aug. 31, 1977, and to two years for wilfully killing her bull, kept at the farm where he worked, March 5, 1978. Both terms will be served concurrently.

The case is believed to have established a precedent in the English-speaking world by holding, for the first time, that a person can be found criminally responsible for the action of an animal.

The prosecution said Schultz tethered the bull, usually kept in a shed, in a yard full of derelict cars and released his vicious dog named Susie, usually shut in an old car, then left the potato farm with friends, returning later to find the bull dead, one day after the girl told Schultz she wasn't going back to work on the farm.

Cashman said Schultz had an atrocious criminal record, mainly involving crimes of forgery and uttering, and had spent 12½ years of his life in jail which showed his disregard for law and order.

He disagreed with the evaluation of a probation officer who recommended a short jail term, saying the officer had not told him how she came to that conclusion. And he noted a psychiatric report said treatment is unlikely to change Schultz.

There was no doubt that Schultz took advantage of the girl, now aged 15, while she was staying at the farm babysitting his niece. And, he added, Schultz threatened harm to her animals if she said anything.

Cashman doubted if the sex offence would have come to light except for the killing of the bull.

He described Schultz as "certainly a person who has violent tendencies . . . and he is a person from whom the public needs protection. I can see little hope that he will be rehabilitated by any form of treatment he may be given."

He said the bull suffered a lingering death with its rear end literally torn away by a dog Schultz had and knew to be vicious.

The bull was found dead between two derelict cars a few feet apart with its tether taught.

Crown counsel Donald Laughton said the deterrence of others and the protection of the public from Schultz must be the first consideration in sentencing. He also urged Cashman to make the sentences consecutive but the judge disagreed on that point.

Defence counsel Terry Dalton said Schultz had been a good citizen and hard worker in the four years since he was last in jail, and he could not see the benefit to society of a long jail term. He also said the offences were related and urged a concurrent sentence.

The only comment Schultz made was to ask to be sentenced to Wilkinson Road jail, which would mean a term of less than two years, instead of the B.C. Penitentiary, to which people are sent for terms of two years and longer.

Indecent Assault Nets Year

A 32-year-old city man, who subjected a 14-year-old girl to what county court Judge Leslie Cashman said must have been a terrifying experience, was sentenced Thursday to one year in jail.

Raymond Charles Brunt, also known as Raymond Charles Armit, was told that but for a psychiatric report, he would have been sentenced to jail for a considerable time for unlawful confinement and indecent assault.

Court was told that two girls were hitch-hiking Oct. 18 in the 2400-block Sooke Road and were picked up by Brunt. One girl was dropped off but the other girl was driven past where she wanted to get out. She tried to jump out of the vehicle but Brunt stopped her by pulling her hair.

He then drove to Metchosin where the indecent assault occurred. Afterwards, he told he to leave and she ran 1.3 miles to a house and phoned her parents and police.

Cashman noted that Brunt says he is embarrassed and ashamed at his conduct and at a loss to explain it. The psychiatric report said he was not a sex deviate, not a violent person, that he showed contrition and was unlikely to be a repeater.

Brunt pleaded guilty to both offences May 2. Cashman made the one-year sentence for both offences concurrent.

All mortgages are not the same.

Make sure you get your money's worth.

If you're planning to buy a home, there are a lot of places to get a mortgage. Just about every financial institution in the country offers them. But they are not all the same. Interest rates can differ dramatically; terms can range from one to five years; some have life insurance options, others don't. The list goes on. So, what we're saying is that it pays to shop around—very carefully. The difference can be substantial over a typical 25 year mortgage. We'll be very surprised if you can beat our total package. Please read on.

Figuring out what you can really afford isn't always easy—until you come and see us. We have a handy little calculator for you that will help you compute answers to most of your financial questions—and our staff will handle the rest.

Mortgage calculator.

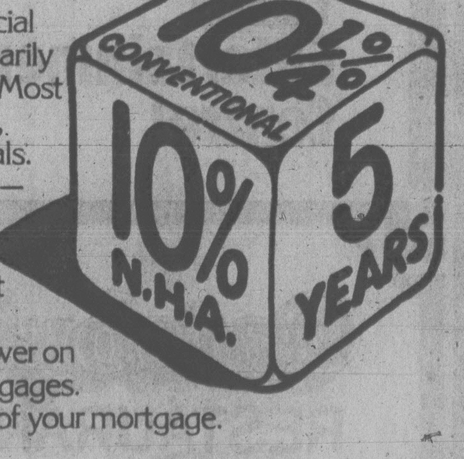
The best protection money can buy.

We know that our group life insurance option is the best and the cheapest you can get. Depending upon age, it could be as little as $5.20 a month on a $40,000 mortgage. And a lot of other lenders don't even offer group mortgage life insurance.

Quite simply, if you want it, we've got it. There are enough considerations in buying a house without worrying about where to get this protection elsewhere.

Weigh the numbers carefully.

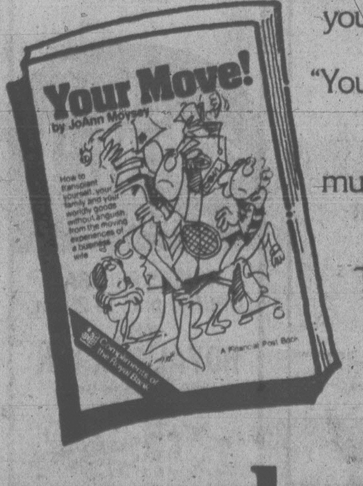
The interest rate you get from many financial institutions today isn't necessarily the one you'll have next year. Most mortgages are subject to one, three or five year term renewals. We only offer a five-year term—to give you a hedge against inflation for the longest time. And, compared to most other financial institutions, we're at least 1/4 to 1/2% lower on NHA and Conventional mortgages. That can add up, over the life of your mortgage.



We can help make your move a little easier.

We've got a unique "Mover's" Program of services to help you save money if you're a customer and are moving. It includes our super book, "Your Move!", that tells you all you really need to know about moving; a special Mover's Loan of up to $2,500 for three months, at much lower than usual rates. And, of course, we have Termplan Personal Loans at our flexible bank interest rates.

There's much more. So why don't you get moving to any branch of the Royal Bank today. We can help you from start to finish.



Do your homework with us.

Industrialist Weds at 79

WARWICK, Bermuda — Industrialist K. C. Irving, 79, married Winnifred Jane Johnston here Thursday, a spokesman for the Irving Companies said Thursday.

Miss Johnston had been Irving's secretary for several years, the spokesman said.

Irving moved from New Brunswick, where his diversified business interests are based, to Bermuda six years ago.

Irving's first wife, Harriet, died in May, 1976.

Encounter Prize

LONDON — The Cutty Sark scotch whisky firm says it will give a prize of $1.8-million to anyone who can produce evidence that people from other planets can travel to earth.

Company director Ray Taylor said the firm will pay if anyone can produce a craft which has transported extraterrestrial beings to earth, or an unmanned reconnaissance vehicle, a missile, or anything else from outer space.

"We are deadly serious about this," said Taylor. "A considerable body of scientific opinion is convinced we are not alone in the universe."

King Farouk's Mother Dies

BEVERLY HILLS — Nazli Fouad, the former Queen of Egypt whose life shifted from palaces on the Nile to bankruptcy and family tragedy, has died at her Beverly Hills home.

She had lived in Southern California for nearly 30 years — ever since her royal title and $5,000-a-month allowance were stripped by her son Farouk, who was angered when his sister, Princess Fathia, married an Egyptian commoner, Riad Ghali, a diplomat assigned to the traveling royal party.

Her husband, King Fouad died in 1936.

The former queen was barred from returning to Egypt, and lived in exile in a 28-room mansion, which was sold when her fortunes dwindled.

Dial-A-Maven: Find Anything

CHICAGO (AP) — Ellen Levine's business is finding things for people, like an auto horn that plays 15 notes of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, or a perfect plot of clover, or a 1938 vegetable grinder.

"I'm not a dating service," said Ms. Levine, who founded Dial-A-Maven 1½ years ago. "But recently a Jewish mother phoned and said her 40-year-old son had never married and she wanted to be a grandmother. She wanted me to find a wife for him. But the son never called like he told his mother he would."

Since becoming a professional maven—a Yiddish word for an expert or know-it-all—Ms. Levine, 33, has found about 300 items for people calling for her help. Her fee runs from $25 to as much at $100 and she says she gets 20 to 30 calls a week.

"I found an auto horn that played Beethoven's Fifth from a disc recording contraption," she said. "An attorney wanted it, and I also filled his request for a door bell that played the same thing.

"A commercial photographer wanted a perfect plot of clover to do some shots. I called sophisticated greenhouses, but no luck. Then someone told me of a small plot in my own neighborhood where an old woman had planted clover instead of grass—and there were a lot of four-leaf clovers in it, too."

A housewife wanted her to find a witch to break a spell another woman had cast over her husband. "This was one of the strange ones, and I couldn't do it," said Ms. Levine. "But I was able to find a 1938 vegetable grinder operating by a crank after touring antique stores."

Canada Expells Trollers

B.C. fishermen in this matter.

He said a fish war "may well create severe difficulties."

The premier said that B.C. officials had just returned from Ottawa where they had presented the B.C. case, "and there's nothing more we can do."

"It is an international matter involving the federal government, and all we can do is help the federal government by not hindering its efforts to get a successful agreement which will benefit the fisheries part of our economy," he said.

Recreation Minister Sam Bawlf, the minister responsible for fisheries, could not be reached for comment.

In a related development, a group of congressmen told the U.S. treasury department Thursday the United States should impose duties on Canadian fish imports.

The 38 House of Representatives and U.S. Senate members, led by Senator Edward Kennedy and Representative Gerry Studds, said such a duty is necessary to offset the effect Canadian fish imports has on the prices paid to U.S. fishermen.

Studds said the imports are subsidised by Ottawa.

"As a result, most of the fish products imported into the country by Canada can be purchased at prices lower than our American fishermen can afford to charge," Studds said in a statement. "The effects have been devastating."

Trouble with the 1978 interim reciprocal fisheries agreement stemmed from both coasts, although the West Coast situation attracted more attention.

The U.S. asked Canada to close the Swiftsure Banks off southern B.C. April 15 for conservation reasons, a move Canada didn't make until mid-May because the Americans never provided reasons for the closure. But the U.S. refused to allow B.C. salmon trollers increased access to Washington State salmon as it had agreed to under the 1978 agreement.

Socreds Rake NDP Over Report Release

want to call any more attention to the situation.

But Bawlf said NDP MLA Graham Lea waved the document in the house on Wednesday, saying the government should put pressure on Ottawa.

That is exactly what Ottawa didn't want, Bawlf said.

Secretary-treasurer of the UFAWU George Hewison said in January he made the paper public because a U.S. aide had waved a copy of it in his face at a cocktail party in Washington, D.C.

Bawlf admitted the B.C. paper was tabled during the international talks so the entire U.S. negotiating team was aware of the B.C. position.

In the house Thursday Deputy Premier Grace McCarthy tabled documents showing the government had given Don Lockstead (NDP—Mackenzie) a copy of the B.C. brief in trust.

She suggested although he was trustworthy, he was "over-ridden" by other members of his caucus and turned the brief over to Lea.

Over objections from the NDP benches that she was out of order, McCarthy read off the names of Lea, Gary Lauk (Vancouver Centre), Opposition Leader Dave Barrett, Alex Macdonald (Vancouver East) and Ray Skelly (Alberni), calling them an "irresponsible team."

During her lengthy statement, Lea could hardly wait for McCarthy to finish scolding him.

Lea was on his feet quickly saying the government had obviously forgotten the paper had been made public by the UFAWU. He then read the newspaper account of the meeting where Hewison revealed the paper.

The Socred benches, which had been heckling Lea a minute before, fell silent.

Lea then called on McCarthy to withdraw her statements and said she and Bennett should apologize.

Lea said their statements were an "obvious attempt by the government to cover up their stupidities in their dealings with Ottawa."

"They tried to pull a political sham on the legislature," he said.

Lockstead said he kept the confidentiality of the report. Lea obtained his own.

Bennett was not in the house during the exchange and refused to see reporters in his office.

"I guess the premier sent Grace up to do the dirty work while he was hiding sucking his thumb," Lea said outside the house.

McCarthy said she has no intention of apologizing.

Bennett finally broke his silence later Thursday evening when he told a reporter basically what Bawlf had said — that Hewison made the paper public in a convention while Lea did it in the legislatures, apparently a far greater sin.

Measuring the rigging.

The world's best boat designers have spent the last year at their drawing boards trying for a winner. Saturday, their skills are put to the test, and the innovations which work will appear in next year's production sailboats.

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Just as the Indianapolis 500 is a testing ground for manufacturers of racing cars, this year's three-quarter ton world sailboat championships starting here Saturday will be a battleground for the world's top designers.

Although the skippers and crews of the 18 racing machines are all from the United States and Canada, the impact of the radical changes in design will be world-wide.

One of the boats to watch will be Hagar, belonging to Gerald Duncan and Joe Goldberg of the Seattle Yacht Club. Hagar is off the drawing board of Ron Holland, who at 30 ranks as one of the first four designers in his field.

The former New Zealander now works out of a converted stone piggery and lean-to barn in the Irish county of Cork. So much in demand, the time he can spend in the converted stone farmhouse where the Hollands and their two daughters live is minimal.

He was the designer of former British prime minister Ted Heath's newest boat and of several high-ranking entries in the prestigous Admiral's Cup series.

He designed Imp, who with Scaramouche and Bay Bea, formed the American team that placed second. Imp won two races, including the coveted Fastnet, and scored the highest points of all boats.

Another of his boats was Marionette, which with Moonshine and Yeoman XX won first spot for the British. He also designed Iorana III, skippered by W.W. Denzel of the Austrian team, which earned the third highest number of points.

Britton Chance, the naval architect who operates out of Newport, Rhode Island, who has designed 12-metres for America's Cup competition and the designer of Bay Bea, will also be watching the Victoria championships. He designed Sachem for Bill Buchan of Seattle, winner of this year's Swiftsure.

Winner of last year's Swiftsure in Kanata, which he designed himself, architect Vladimir Plavsik will race in his self-designed Spearhead.

The world-renown designers Cuthbertson and Cassion of Oakville, Ont., designed Jo, to be sailed by Jan Huibers of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club.

Graham and Schlageter of Chicago designed Chocolate Chips, which has been trucked up from Indiana, to be raced by Ronald Lester and Ronald Porter of the Michigan City Yacht Club.

Launched March 8, her first competition was in the North American championships in late April when she placed second in her first race, won the next three and finished ninth in the last one, which gave her second spot over-all.

Ton-class racing is a name for six levels of International Offshore Rule ratings which, unlike Swiftsure, allow boats to race as equally as possible, the first boat home being the winner. Three-quarter ton is close to the IOR rating limit of 24.5, boats measuring about 30 to 35 feet in length.

This week, measurers headed by B.C.'s chief measurer John Evetts of Vancouver were kept busy measuring sails, rudders and other boat equipment.

Because of design innovations, world championship boats are often raced for only one season, being replaced by even more radical designs the following year. Many of the innovations introduced in world championships gradually are implemented by designers of more conventional craft.

Each boat will have a crew of six.

A 25-mile Olympic course will be raced Saturday, starting about two miles south of Clover Point. Similar races are scheduled for Sunday and next Thursday.

On Monday there will be the short offshore race of 130 miles which will follow most of the Swiftsure course.

The final race will be sailed next Friday. It will be a long 249½-mile race with a time limit of 54 hours, again arranged on the Swiftsure course.

Forests Closing Early As Fire Hazard Climbs

A long-range forecast for continued warm, sunny weather may be a blessing for those planning an outdoors weekend but it spells trouble for those responsible for protecting the forests.

Temperatures in the mid-20s have raised the forest fire hazard on southern Vancouver Island into the "high" range and some other areas in B.C. have a similar or "moderate" reading.

This has already led to one logging company closing its road to the public.

Pacific Logging says the Bear Creek-Diversion Reservoir area near Jordan River will be closed to recreational access this weekend.

Weekes Lake gate will remain open.

Barry Mountain, ranger for the Langford district, said today people should be careful with fire in the woods.

He had to contend with two fires Thursday. The first broke out on new B.C. Hydro right-of-way being cleared near Mount Finlayson. It took about two hours before air tankers, brought in from Kamloops, had the blaze under control about 2 p.m.

The second fire broke out closer to Shawnigan Lake on the right-of-way later in the evening. It took about two hours for ground crews to bring that one under control.

Mountain said a relatively new infra-red scanner, which every ranger station has been equipped with this year, was used on the right-of-way early this morning and there were no hot spots.

There have been 232 forest fires in B.C. so far this year compared to 318 for the same period in 1977.

Hank Doerksen of the forest protection division said today the increasingly hot days will likely put most areas into the "high" fire hazard reading by the end of the weekend.

Camosun Principal: 36 Apply

Camosun College has received 36 applications from across Canada for the job of principal, chairman Janet Baird said Thursday.

Councillors and committee members will start sorting through the applications and hope to select a new principal by mid-July, she said.

Present principal, Dr. Grant Fisher, decided to step down after seven years to make room for someone with a new approach, Baird said.

Dr. Fisher will stay at Camosun to teach administration.

PO SHUTTING 'PARTY AREA'

Customers who rent post boxes at the main Victoria Post Office have been told that the lock box lobby will be closed at night effective June 12 because the Post Office cannot guarantee proper security of the mails.

"The lobby is being used as a lavatory, a sleeping area or a place to hold a party during the night hours," explains Al Bennett, assistant manager of the retail and delivery department, in a letter to box users.

"Complaints have been received regularly about the filth of this area and the fact that some people are afraid to enter."

In the past, the lobby containing 1,100 boxes has been open on a 24-hour basis. Starting June 12 it will be open from 6:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Friday, 7 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday but closed all day Sunday and on holidays.

The letter says although city police have been keeping a close watch on the lobby, with their other commitments they cannot provide full protection.

Bennett said today the problem has been getting steadily worse, to the point where night and Sunday closure was the only practical solution.

In a recent early morning incident, police evicted 10 people who had spent the night in sleeping bags on the floor.

"We have had a number of customer complaints about the behavior, males and females together," he added.

Bennett said there have been parties and fights in the lobby and mail boxes have been knocked back about one foot, making it possible to enter the main Post Office area or for someone to reach in and take mail from the back of the boxes.

"It's primarily our concern for mail security that has forced us to take this action," he said.

Boom Predicted Despite Closures

Victoria MLA Sam Bawlf and Mayor Mike Young said Thursday the region is on the verge of major economic expansion, despite closure of several manufacturing plants.

In separate interviews, they said the layoff of 96 James Island employees is a serious economic and psychological blow — especially after the loss of 62 jobs at McDonald's bakery and the announcement that almost 200 forest ministry jobs will be transferred out of the city.

But while manufacturing jobs are being lost, others are being created and the nature of Victoria is changing.

They both described Victoria as being at the crossroads and about to take a new economic direction.

Mayor Young said he had pushed for rapid development of the tourist industry "although it is not everyone's cup of tea" to cushion the economic blow during the expected closure of some manufacturing plants here.

"Tourism is something that can be developed almost overnight. You throw a party and invite everyone here. However, this is ancient history now. It is already under way. We have to move strongly in other areas."

These would include new major hotels and supporting services.

"Perhaps the time has come to take a trip east and steal a few pocket industries as well."

Closure of James Island explosive plant was no surprise to Young who worked there briefly 22 years ago and even then there were reports of an imminent closure.

"The plant has had several reprieves. This closure is not unexpected but it is a serious blow. I have counted 40 industries that have closed here in 20 years. The pattern is clear."

But the future could be bright in new directions, he said, especially if the region gets the type of co-operation from government agencies that it did on developing the tourist industry, which is booming.

Meanwhile, Bawlf said a wave of new jobs can be expected for Victoria both in the provincial civil service and in private enterprise.

The provincial government will be adding to the Victoria payroll despite the loss of almost 200 jobs in the ministry of forests.

"I can tell you there will be a net increase in provincial government jobs in Victoria in the current year," he said.

For example, he said, there are or will soon be an additional 49 jobs created for Victoria this year in areas under his jurisdiction, the ministry of recreation and conservation and B.C. Ferries Corporation.

Most other ministries will show a net increase in Victoria jobs this year as well.

Bawlf said he is gathering statistics to support this statement.

In addition, Bawlf said, there will be four task forces operating this summer to create additional jobs for the Victoria area.

The task forces will study:

— Opportunities to expand Victoria's fishing fleet;

— Logical sites for a convention-arts centre;

— Methods of expanding Victoria's growing scientific research industry.

Three of the task forces are already at work and the fourth, on research industries, will be formed within a month. Bawlf said that, except for universities, Victoria already has the largest collection of scientific research industries in Western Canada.

TOWN TALK

Yachtsmen competing in the three-quarter ton world championships, the first race of which will be on Saturday, will take time out to do a little socializing this evening.

Along with the five-man international jury for the championships, writers and photographers, the sailors will don more formal duds for a reception at Government House.

The reception has been arranged by Provincial Secretary and Travel Industry Minister Grace McCarthy's ministry.

Motorists wondering how to describe distance travelled when automobile odometers read in kilometres may try getting used to metrage in place of mileage.

The word means the same in French or English and according to a majority of letters appearing in the Metric Monitor, a publication of Metric Commission Canada, metrage is preferred.

It beats clickage, a word which topped a Toronto contest for a suitable replacement, but ran third in a cross-country CBC radio survey after kilomage and kilage.

Local architect Ben Levinson believes children between 3 and 10 years of age can be taught to make solar collectors and intends to prove it.

On Saturday, June 10, he will give a speech to children of this age group at two public libraries — 10:30 a.m. at the McClung branch library at 3950 Cedar Hill and 2:30 p.m. in the Oak Bay branch library at 1442 Monterey.

He will explain how solar collectors can be made and adapted to existing houses and has prepared a mock-up of a solar collector which will help the children understand the principle of a solar collector. He has also prepared a brochure, illustrated and written in simple language, to give to the children.

"Solar power is becoming more feasible each day because fuel costs are rising," Levinson said. "By the time today's child is grown and ready to build his house, solar heating will be just as popular as the electronic calculators of today."

Victoria libertarians no longer must go to Vancouver to attend civil liberties association meetings because a group is being formed here.

Spokesman Frank Preston says an organizing committee comprising 10 members, including three UVic professors, is in the process of getting an association incorporated and established in Victoria.

A membership drive likely will be launched later in the summer.

He says the group will tackle several issues, such as freedom of information from government and data banks, RCMP probes and illegal operations, Human Rights issues, prisoners' rights and local police board priorities.

Preston, a technician with the Victoria engineering department, is a volunteer worker with prisoners at William Head. His wife, Norrie, is active in the Status of Women League.

It took a lot of door-knocking and pavement-pounding but volunteers raised $14,000 in the Victoria area and $17,000 on the rest of Vancouver Island for the Multiple Sclerosis Society in this year's campaign.

The money will be used for multiple sclerosis research.

More about the mail delivered with insufficient postage and no penalty: post office spokesman Buz Sawyer says the item cited Tuesday with 12 cents instead of the new first-class rate of 14 cents might actually have been a third-class letter, proper postage for which is 12 cents. (It wasn't)

He adds: "Anyone can beat the system in this democratic society based on mutual trust. We trust people to put the right postage on. We might intercept it (with the wrong postage), but it might slip by.

"It's like your lock boxes — people can steal newspapers if they want to, and they do. But unless it was a mistake, it's outright theft. It's stealing revenue from the post office."

Deception Laid To Car Dealer

Speedway Motors Ltd. of Victoria and company sales manager Roy Passmore were charged in provincial court today with a violation of the Trade Practices Act.

Both were remanded to next Friday for plea.

Speedway is charged with deceptive practice in connection with the sale of a 1975 Volkswagen Rabbit to John Lawford, 306 Bessborough.

The company at 971 Yates is alleged to have been deceptive and misleading in describing the vehicle's usage.

The purchaser had allegedly been told that the car was a demonstrator. It was later found out that the vehicle had been involved in a serious accident.

'Little Hun' Sets Out Bombers' Priorities

It is second down, four yards to go. Quarterback Ralph Brock drops back and lofts a 65-yard pass in the general direction of Fargo, N.D.

A shot rings out. Brock crumples to the turf. The trainers run out and drag him off to the sidelines, where Ray Jauch stands with a smoking rifle. "Get in there," Jauch snarls to Harry Knight, "and remember; I've got one bullet left."

Ray Jauch has acquired many nicknames. As a player in Winnipeg he was The Toy Bulldog. As a coach in Edmonton he was known with varying degrees of affection as The Little Hun. Other coaches with reputations for toughness claim they would cut their mothers. Jauch wouldn't, at least not right away. First he'd try to stiff another team by trading her.

In recent years the just-miss champions of western football have been coached by The Three Bears: Joe Zaleski, who was too nice; Jim Spavital, who was too tough, and Bud Riley, who fell somewhere in the middle. Unfortunately, the fall killed him. Now they have Jauch. Had he been Pappa Bear the story would have ended early: "Sit in your chairs, eat your porridge, go up for your nap and Shuddup, already!" The bear who refused would be Instant Rug.

It is said that Jauch has three priorities: to "encourage" Brock to cultivate the intermediate, or Ron Lancaster, zones instead of going for the fences; to find a large, tough and intimidating tight end who also catches passes, thus enabling him to scrap Riley's double wingback offence; and to revamp the defensive secondary.

There is also the matter of replacing wingback Tommy Scott, who played out his option and fled to the Eskimos, but the Bombers are treating that rather matter-of-factly. They've signed three ex-NFL wide receivers—John Green of Denver, Ken Smith of New England and Richard Rivas of Miami and Tampa Bay—but in his heart of hearts Jauch is hoping a Canadian like Mark McDonald can do the job well enough to allow him the luxury of three import offensive linemen.

The problem with the Bombers is that they've come so close the last two years.

Last season they were within the length of Joe Fourquean's finger of beating B.C. Lions in the western semifinal. They had the west's leading rusher in Jim Washington, and No. 4 in Richard Crump. They had two of the top three receivers in Scott and Gord Paterson. People like Lancaster have insisted for two years that Brock is the best young quarterback in the league.

So how much do you tinker with an engine that purrs more often than it misfires? General manager Earl Lunsford says that's entirely up to Jauch.

"For the first time since I've been here," he says, "we're starting the season with a man who has been a head coach in the league. Zaleski, Spavital, Riley—they were all assistants moving up. Ray has the credentials, the positiveness, the knowledge of the league as a player, a coach and a general manager. He has the confidence to say that a housecleaning isn't needed. But the players will know who's running things, and that they'll perform or they'll be gone."

Jauch has signed large bunches of offensive linemen, all with some NFL experience. The one they're drooling over is Ira Watley, a 6'4" 265-pounder by way of Los Angeles Rams whom Lunsford calls "another John Helton" when it comes to quickness-for-size. Have you noticed how many new John Helton's disappear, especially after they go against the original?

Presumably he wants to give Brock a shade more time in which to consider the shorter vistas of the football field. At times last year he threw as high as he threw deep, being horizontal at the time.

If possible, the tight end will be Canadian. They're looking people named Evan Jones (of Victoria, incidentally) and Leo Ezerins and crossing fingers. But even if they have to go with an import and sacrifice a line spot they'll be explosive as ever with Washington, Crump, Paterson and Mike Holmes, who arrived late last season and may be one of the finest receivers in the country this year.

Defensively, he's brought in some speed to push Vince Phason and Chuck Wills and give Brian Herosian some help deep. Naturally, they all run the 40 in nothing flat. He also has plans for more work for Gary Rosolowich, the Canadian kid who turned the punt return into a sort of suicidal art form last season and now seems ready to do more.

There are the inevitable number of large defensive linemen around, all competing for two spots because Lyle Woznesensky and the eternal Jim Heighton are still there and still Canadian. The best of the crop may be Marty Smith, who did a lot of starting in Buffalo, joined the Bombers late last season and tore a knee after looking good for 20 minutes.

But you get the impression that the Bombers feel the best off-season recruiting job was done at the Grey Cup game, where Jauch made it known he was tired of being a general manager and Lunsford gratefully reeled him in.

Lunsford is delighted. The players are delighted. Lunsford plans to stay delighted—but then, he doesn't have to practice.

Bellies Create Irish Problem

How do they beat New Westminster Salmonbellies in Queen's Park Arena.

The Irish lost their second game in as many encounters in the New Westminster facility Thursday night, dropping a 14-9 decision as Salmonbellies staged a rally in the second period.

Shamrocks lost their first game at Queen's Park 11-8 earlier this season and managed to beat the New Westminster squad 19-12 in their only other tussle this season in Victoria last Saturday.

The Shamrocks led 3-2 after the first period but New Westminster surged ahead 8-5 by the end of the second.

Wayne Goss, who was missing from the lineup during the loss in Victoria, scored three goals and had four assists to lead Salmonbellies while Bob Tasker, Norm Levszler and Eric Cowieson added two goals apiece. Singles were added by Brian Tasker, Kenny Brown, Bill Mosdell, Ivan Tuura and Mario Govorchin.

Rick Baker scored three to lead Victoria, with a pair added by Ron McNeil and singles from Larry Bell, Gord Lyons, Ivan Thompson and Jerry Kustaski.

WEST GERMAN CHAMPS UNIMAGINATIVE IN SCORELESS DRAW

Blanket of Gloom Clouds Opener

BUENOS AIRES (Reuter) — West Germany's grinding, scoreless draw with Poland left a blanket of gloom over the opening of the 1978 World Cup soccer finals, but favored Argentina could strike a blow for adventurous soccer in today's three-match program.

After all the ballyhoo leading up to Thursday's kickoff match at the River Plate Stadium, there was a feeling of deflation after the West Germans looked anything but defending world champions against the Poles.

The Germans came to Argentina after suffering defeats in successive matches against Brazil and Sweden. Against Poland, their decline continued. Their defence was uneasy, they were unimaginative in midfield and non-existent in attack.

Manager Helmut Schoen, the guiding force behind West German soccer during a 14-year reign as national team manager, admitted that it was a "very poor game." Former West German World Cup star Guenther Netzer described the German performance as "shocking" while retired Brazilian idol Pele said Brazil had nothing to fear from European teams on the evidence of Thursday's match.

Poland had more cause for satisfaction. With a little luck they could have won comfortably against the Germans and manager Jacek Gmoch said it was only the brilliance of ageless goalkeeper Sepp Maier which stopped his team winning.

But even Maier knew little about a fierce ground shot from Polish captain Kazimierz Deyna which struck him on the legs when destined for the back of the net.

Grzegorz Lato and Andzrej Szarmach, the top scorers in the 1974 tournament when Poland was third after losing to West Germany in the semifinals, showed they had lost none of their menace while Wlodzimierz Lubanski still had something to offer after fighting his way back into the team following serious injury.

(The Scotland-Peru game may be seen on closed circuit TV at Memorial Arena at 12:45 p.m.)

Remembering that this was the fourth successive scoreless draw in World Cup opening matches, there was a feeling that the strain of the occasion might have been responsible for the poor match.

The result confirmed the view that both teams will qualify for the second round from Group 2 where their rivals are Mexico and Tunisia, who meet today at Rosario.

But much more interest will be focused on the two opening matches in the fiercely competitive Group 1—Argentina against Hungary in Buenos Aires and France versus Italy in Mar del Plata.

An eagerly awaited clash is the meeting between France and Italy. After a victory over Brazil, France has jumped into the reckoning as a long-shot contender for the title while Italy is struggling to break a tradition of failures in World Cup tournaments.

Mexico should score a comfortable win over Group 2 minnows Tunisia, not expected to pick up any points and rated 1,000-to-one outsiders by London bookmakers.

Competition in Group 3 and 4 begins Saturday. Spain meets Austria and Sweden plays Brazil in Group 3 while Scotland meets Peru and Iran meets the Netherlands in Group 4.

Sandown Park Harness Meet Goes Saturday

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

Harness racing begins at Sandown Saturday after an absence of 22 years with a full card of 10 races and featuring an invitational handicap of the fastest runners on the grounds.

Admission will be $1 and first post will be 1:30 p.m.

It was in the 50s that harness racing was held here in 1956 under the auspices of the B.C. Jockey Club. It didn't take at that time. It lasted only five days. But that wsn't unusual. Even the thoroughbreds couldn't make ends meet in those days.

The return of the standardbreds this year is under the direction of Sandown Harness Raceway, which is an offshoot of Orangeville Raceways, which operated the recently highly-successful meeting at Cloverdale.

Keeling Sr. got the sulky sport rolling at Cloverdale just two and one-half years ago. Since that time attendance and the mutuel handle have increased dramatically. At the close of this year's meeting the average daily mutuel handle was $240,000, an increase of over $100,000 since the beginning in 1976.

Previous to coming west, Keeling and his family, operated a harness raceway at Orangeville, Ont., which they still do, thus the name — Orangeville Raceways.

Other members of the executive of Sandown Harness Raceway are: Doug Gillespie, concessions manager; Bob McReavy, mutuel manager; J.B. Kelly, program annd concessions; and John Kent, security.

Racing secretary is Leary Claypool while Brian Middleton is the commission judge representing the B.C. Racing Commission.

There will be win, place and show, and exactor wagering on every race.

The meeting will run for a total of 57 days, four days a week, Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays, ending Sept. 9.

Post time on weekdays will be 5:30 p.m. and on Saturdays and holidays, 1:30 p.m.

Buses to Sandown will leave from the Vancouver Island Coach Lines at 12:30 p.m. on Saturdays and at 4:30 p.m. on weekdays.

There will also be bus service from the ferry terminal at Swartz Bay at 4:40 p.m. on weekdays and 12:40 p.m. Saturdays.

Duncan and other Up-Island fans are asked to contact the Vancouver Island Coach Lines regarding service to Sandown.

In addition, two of the nation's leading drivers, Keith Linton and Joe Hudon will be at Sandown for the meeting.

Linton currently is the nation's leader with 121 victories while Hudon a few weeks ago represented Canada in the world driving championships, where he finished fourth.

FRED SHERO
. . . off to New York

NEW YORK (AP) — John Ferguson spent the day on the phone with his scouts, planning which players New York Rangers might choose in the upcoming National Hockey League draft of junior players.

He should never have hung up.

Ferguson's phone rang again at 6 p.m. Thursday. Team president Bill Jennings was on the line. "He said, 'I'm sorry, but Fred Shero has been signed as coach and general manager,' " Ferguson recalled.

So Ferguson, who answered the phone as the Rangers' general manager, was unemployed before the receiver returned to its cradle. So was Jean-Guy Talbot, who endured a year as the Rangers coach.

In their place is Shero, who resigned as coach of Philadelphia Flyers on May 18 but saw his retirement last just 14 days. While Ferguson pondered who the Rangers would choose first in the draft two weeks from now, his bosses were trading that selection, and an unspecified amount of cash, to the Flyers for the right to sign Shero to a five-year contract at a reported $200,000 a year.

"Frankly, I don't feel that bad because the club's in good shape," said a subdued Ferguson in a telephone interview. "They've got good young kids; the two Swedish players, Ulf Nilsson and Anders Hedberg, will be great. So there's a good, solid nucleus."

But now it's in the hands of the 52-year-old Shero, who guided the Flyers to Stanley Cup championships in 1974 and 1975.

"I'm disappointed, but not disheartened," said Ferguson, hired by the Rangers on Jan. 7, 1976. "It would be different if I had left the club in bad shape. I don't have any resentment, but I must say it caught me totally by surprise."

He might have been the only person in New York who didn't see it coming. Madison Square Garden President Sonny Werblin, the man who brought Joe Namath to football's Jets and bought the Swedes for Ferguson's Rangers, had promised sweeping changes.

Mac and Blo Folios Need Some Changes

MacMillan Bloedel is to be commended for the two folios submitted to the Forest Service on the Walbran and Carmanah watersheds just south of Nitinat Lake on the east coast of the Island — with a few important provisos.

This writer managed to sneak out of the office Wednesday and drive up to Port Alberni where the folios are available for viewing at the ranger station. Copies are also available at the Vancouver District headquarters in Vancouver. They'll be on view at both locations until Monday and public input is being sought.

The Carmanah Creek folio covers 23,500 acres and the Walbran folio, which includes part of the Caycuse River, covers about 29,650 acres. Both are scheduled for logging in the near future with access routes now being prepared through the Caycuse drainage and the Looper Creek-Haddon Creek systems, respectively.

Approximately 10,000 acres lying between the Walbran folio and the West Coast Trail is under B.C Forest Products control and isn't scheduled to be developed until at least 1988.

The resource report on the Carmanah folio states that the limited fisheries values of the system "could be affected by the introduction of significant amounts of sediment and debris due to improper forest management activities."

Carmanah Creek has a waterfall about 2.7 kilometres from the ocean which blocks passage of salmon and steelhead but resident trout are found above the falls for about 21 km. Population levels of deer and waterfowl were also rated as low.

Carnamah's recreation potential is restricted to hiking and nature study, according to the report.

The Walbran system, however, is a little different.

Steelhead, resident rainbows, Dolly Vardens and Kokanee all inhabit the system and the Caycuse River drainage supports salmon (chums, coho and chinooks) as well as steelhead.

"Walbran Creek, in particular, requires site-specific management to protect deciduous and understory streamside vegetation during forest management activities," states the folio report.

Wildlife values, too, are greater. Deer are more plentiful and the lakes — Anderson, Augur, Botley and Hadikin are "used intermitently by trumpeter swans in fall and spring." Bear and cougar signs were also present in the system.

The survey teams compiling the folio found three potential recreation sites within the BCFP tenure — two waterfall areas and one "elevated vista viewpoint" — and concluded that recreation throughout the system would revolve around angling and "scenic viewing."

Resource priorities for both folios were established as: 1. forest management; 2. fisheries management; 3. recreation considerations; 4. wildlife considerations."

And now, for the criticism.

In both folios, the steps outlined to protect acquatic habitats are good but too many contain the limiting phrases "will be" (protected) "if possible" and "where possible."

A little more commitment might be in order.

Most of the other points of contention are in the Walbran folio, which states: "Due to the long rainy/cloudy/foggy periods during the year, visitor use is expected to be low."

It also says that due "to the limited recreational and wildlife resources within the watershed, no adverse interations with timber development/harvest are anticipated."

The authors of the report seem to forget opening up the area will increase its use by recreationists. They also choose to ignore the fact that somewhere in the order of 10,000 people used the West Coast Trail last year — despite the wet weather.

A check with Vancouver District headquarters of the Forest Service revealed their recreational forester will be asking Mac and Blo for a little more work on recreational aspects before proceeding with any logging applications.

The lakes in the Walbran folio rate more protection, considering their present and possible angling value.

Anderson Lake contains viable populations of Dolly Varden, Kokanee and rainbows while three other lakes — Hadikin, Auger and Botley — don't have populations now but do have the potential to support self-sustaining populations of trout after stocking.

The scrub and second-growth timber around the east side of Anderson precludes development there but logging could come fairly close to the west side. The other lakes could conceivably be logged right to the shoreline.

In the interests of preserving the angling resources, both existing and potential, as well as the scenic values of the lakes themselves, a few more protective measures should be written into the folio.

Bridesmaid Leads by One

TORONTO (CP) — Beth Stone has been to close to winning in past years to get excited about holding the opening-day lead.

Thursday she shot the best round of her professional career over the 6,265-yard par-73 St. George's Golf and Country Club—a seven-under-par 66—to take a one stroke lead in the $100,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

Stone, 38, is one stroke ahead of Susan O'Connor who also shot her best sub-par round—a six-under-par 67.

Incredibly, during the last 17 years and the opening 13 tournaments of 1978, Stone has never won.

Second? Yes, a bridesmaid many times. A total of five in all with the last No. 2 spot occurring in the 1974 women's U.S. open.

Painter struck out 11 batters and allowed only two walks and five hits while leading Farmers to an eighth consecutive victory.

At the plate, Painter helped boost his record to 4-0 by hitting two singles in three trips to drive in two runs.

Builders Upset Sooke

One day can make quite a difference to Juan de Fuca Builders.

A junior team campaigning in the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League, the Glen Bullen-coached Builders looked a trifle out of their class when Seaboard Construction thumped Juan de Fuca 16-4 on Wednesday.

Thursday, the tune changed at Central Park. The youthful Builders received a smart pitching performace from Len Carolan and surprised Sooke Merchants 2-1.

Carolan worked out of a two-on, nobody-out situation in the second inning and stranded six more Sooke runners in the last three innings. The stranded included Mike Banner, who drove in Ken Maycock by tripling with nobody out.

Singles by George Graham, Steve Coleman, Carolan and catcher Pete Rumsby punched across Juan de Fuca's two runs in the bottom of the sixth.

The victory boosted Juan de Fuca's record to five wins and six losses while Sooke is 5-5.

At Heywood Avenue Park, Remco Office Supplies managed only four hits but errors and Ken Geary's three-run homer made the difference as the team edged Athletics 5-4 in a Heywood Men's League encounter. Bob Richdale allowed only three hits, including a two-run home run by John Iverson.

At Hyacinth, Butler Brothers struck for nine runs in the fifth inning to edge Combos 12-11 while Ingraham Hotel defeated Hygrade Radio 8-4 in Senior Women's League action. Hitters improved their averages by connecting for 51 hits in the two games.

Mavis and Diana Underwood each had three hits for Butlers while Cathy Cave went five-for-five for Combos.

James Bay Inn outlasted Mayfair Insurance 18-16 in extra innings, Strathcona dropped Birch Builders 9-2 and James Bay Athletic Association edged Trafalger Legion 10-8 in Macdonald Park Men's League play.

Lions Sign Guard

COURTENAY (CP) — British Columbia Lions have signed guard Tony Rice of San Jose State to a 1978 Canadian Football League contract.

Rice was brought to training camp Wednesday after Canadian rookie Gary Evans failed his physical examination, leaving the Lions short of manpower at the guard position.

Head coach Vic Rapp said he wants to get another import linebacker into camp. The Lions failed to sign Tom Perry of the University of Colorado.

Football Scholarship To Victorian

Gordon Campbell of Victoria has received a $500 B.C. Amateur Football Association scholarship to attend the University of British Columbia, where he expects to study law.

Campbell, 18, is a graduate of Spectrum and played as a linebacker with Saanich Hornets of the Vancouver Island Juvenile Football League.

AROUND OUR SHORES

There'll be no club racing at the Royal Victoria Yacht Club this weekend because of the three-quarter ton world championship series which begin Saturday and continue throughout next week.

But you can bet there will be lots of club members around to watch the activity and provide cheer sections for the crews, particularly the three RVYC entries.

Ted Trenholme has been campaigning his Impatience, designed by Gary Mull of Alameda, Calif. for quite some time and friends are hoping his winning streak will continue.

He shares top honors with Piute Logic, the Soling sailed by Rod Andrews and Rick Parkinson, in the recently completed spring series of the Turkey Head Sailing Association, winning Sunday's race to cinch the series.

Ron Saunders placed second in the series. Tied for third spot were Bill Hingley's Quintango and Bob Callow's Minstrel.

Finishing sfter Impatience on Sunday were Gary Cooney's Hocus, followed by Pendragon, another world championships contender. She's owned by John MacLaurin of Los Angeles. Next came Piute Logic and Irrawaddy.

Skippering the other two RVYC boats in the worlds will be Greg Oliver and Jan Huibers. Greg will be at the helm of Tapocketa, designed by Dick Carter of Newport, Rhode Island, while Jan will be in Jo, designed by Cuthbertson and Cassian of Oakville, Ont.

Another Vancouver Island entry is Finn Nielsen's Riotous Assembly of the Maple Bay Yacht Club.

Finn and his crew have been extra busy this week getting her ready for the worlds. She took part in last week's Juan de Fuca class but had to withdraw because of a bent rudder post. Since then they've built a stronger one.

Finn built Riotous Assembly especially for the world championships. She's designed by Paul Whiting of New Zealand.

Among local boats that ran into grief on the Swiftsure weekend was Joe Isherwood's new sloop Sea Dance. Entered in the Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet section of Swiftsure, she withdrew early in the race after blowing out her main.

Joe bought the main from George O'Brien, owner of the 12-meter Endless Summer, which was originally the Australian America's Cup challenger Dame Pattie. Hundreds of Victorians saw that main in 1972 when Endless Summer streamed over the finish line to become over-all winner of Swiftsure.

This was Sea Dance's first race. Registered with the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, she was skippered by Jean-Pierre LeDallic.

While the Swiftsure boats, lacking wind, waited for more than two hours for their first start on Saturday, boats of the Canoe Bay Sailing Club had 30 knot winds for the start of their 29-miler in the Sidney area. Results won't be available until protests against the race committee have been heard.

CFSA will have racing again on Sunday at Esquimalt. There will be 10 a.m. starts for cruising class boats, Sailerettes and dinghies. Because of Swiftsure, only the 420s raced last weekend, the winning skipper being Tora Thyvold.

Short Tacks- Special mention of the week should go to Paul and Margaret Meakes and their 26-footer Desiree. After years of racing Juan de Fuca and Swiftsure, it was a strange feeling to watch the race in Desiree as the Meakes' guest this year.

Both Paul and Margaret have taken the power squadron course and Paul, a mechanics course. By the way they handled Desiree it was obvious they had done their homework, especially during the period they stood by the sloop Red Onion after she became dismasted.

PALMER TO PLAY IN CPGA TOURNEY

VANCOUVER (CP) — Arnold Palmer, the man who helped make the pro golf tour a multi-million-dollar business, has accepted an invitation to play in the Canadian Professional Golfers Association championship Aug. 17-20.

Two Lars for the Canucks?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Canucks have made generous contract offers to Swedish defencemen Lars Lindgren and Lars Zetterstroem, general manager Jake Milford said Thursday.

The players were scouted by Babe Pratt, a member of Hockey's Hall of Fame, at the recent world championships in Prague. Pratt is a member of the Vancouver club's public relations staff and a television analyst.

"If I thought I had the inside track to get them," Milford said, "I'd go to Stockholm tomorrow to sign them.

"But their lawyer is talking to several other NHL teams and he's to get back to me within the next week."

Milford said the Canucks will be making five or six changes next season in an effort to get back into the NHL playoffs, which they've missed for two years.

The Canucks already have released veteran forward Gerry O'Flaherty and signed goaltender Gary Bromley, who played for the champion Winnipeg Jets of the World Hockey Association last season.

Vancouver will have the fourth pick in the NHL amateur draft later this month and Canuck scouts hope to have a shot at centre Ryan Walter of Seattle Breakers, right winger Wayne Babych of Portland Winter Hawks or centre Bill Derlago of Brandon Wheat Kings. All played junior in the Western Canada Hockey League last season.

Orland Kurtenbach, fired as coach in April, will stay on with the Canucks for two years as a scout, a club spokesman said Thursday.

Kurtenbach coached the Canucks for 1½ seasons. He was the team's first captain in 1970-71 when Vancouver entered the NHL as an expansion team. He had two years left on his contract when relieved of the coaching duties by Milford.

The Bridge Expert

In retrospect, today's deal was not a difficult one for the West player to defend correctly. But when the deal arose, the West defender was not on his toes, thereby enabling South to fulfill his contract.

Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	2 ♣	Dble.
2 ♡	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Four of ♣.

North's two-club bid was the initiation of the Stayman convention and East's double showed a club suit. However, West decided to lead a spade, which East won with the ace. At trick two East shifted to the club king, which was allowed to win the trick. The continuation of the club queen was taken by South's ace.

The diamond queen was led next, and when West played low, the queen won the trick. The king of spades was then cashed, and this was followed by the lead of South's remaining club. West, mistakenly, discarded a spade. Dummy, of course, ruffed.

Now came a trump to South's ace, after which another trump lead was made, West's king winning. West was now end-played. If he played back a spade, it would be ruffed in dummy as South, on this lead, would discard his diamond nine. And if, instead, West led a diamond away from his king, declarer would win two more diamond tricks.

When South made his third club lead, West could have avoided being end-played by trumping with his king. He could then have made a safe exit by leading his remaining trump. The defenders would now have had their "book"; and, in time, they would have made a diamond trick.

Actually, declarer did not play the hand properly, although he emerged as a winner. Before leading his third club, he should have cashed his ace of trumps. West would now have the singleton king remaining. If he ruffed the third club lead, he would be end-played. And if he discarded a spade instead, declarer, after ruffing the club in dummy, would simply lead a trump, throwing West into the lead, to achieve the same end-play position.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Saturday, June 3
By SYDNEY OMARR

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Lunar cycle continues high; be confident, trust your own judgment, wear bright colors, state your case with enthusiasm. Your influence spreads; many persons, previously neutral or indifferent, become your ardent boosters.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Light replaces shadow; you will be able to act in a more direct, independent, creative manner. You gain access to special information. Fears, suspicions are swept aside as you take command of your own fate. Leo, Aquarius persons part of your personal acenario.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Accent on romance, creativity, making desires become actualities. You are aided by one who was an ally in past. Loyalties are demonstrated — and proven. Aquarius, Leo and another Cancer featured. Member of opposite sex cares much but wants to talk about food.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Way is cleared for advancement. Element of luck, popularity rides with you. Gemini, Sagittarius figure prominently. Accent on communication, publishing, improving physical appearance. One "in charge" could invite you to social gathering.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Spotlight on desire, travel, philosophy, willingness to make a break away from) "routine security". Be specific, thorough; grasp overall view. Perceive potential. What seems a permanent trap is to give way to an escape hatch.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Excitement of discovery is featured. Involvement is indicated — money, love, past commitments mingle. Partner, close associate or mate reveals some financial facts of life. Be ready for surprises, changes, possibility of travel. A reporter could seek to interview you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Go slow, maintain steady pace, avoid direct confrontations, extremes. Be more careful than usual concerning diet, work procedures. Dependents make known their needs. Make others aware of economic factors. Accent on partnership, marriage.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be positive, check facts — you get "feel" of current situation and you can do something to alleviate problems. Pisces, Virgo figure prominently — so does the number 7. Co-worker, or one who shares your interests, confides innermost thoughts.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Creative force wells within; now is time to express, to state needs, to obtain love, not intrigue or game-playing. Consider age, money, potential — think of yourself and your own welfare. Self-esteem will help others to think highly of you, too.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): What had been speculation will now be clearly defined. Property, older persons, security, basic values, conclusion of transaction — these are spotlighted. Aries, Libra figure prominently — so does the number 9. Check tendency to act in headstrong manner.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Strive to see through "new eyes". Be creative, dare to pioneer, to be original. Short trip, relative, mail, telephone call — these could play significant roles. A Leo can show you a way to "expolit" your product.

IF JUNE 3 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are conscious of appearance, weight. You are artistic, a "good traveler" and you have a fine sense of humor. You are inquisitive, expressive, restless, easily bored and spoiled by members of the opposite sex. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. In October, you begin a financial-emotional comeback.

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"Add the sum of the day numbers in the year after Jane's birthday to their sum for the days before mine," said Clem. "You'll get twice the sum of the day numbers betwen our birthdays."

"Day numbers?" John asked. "You mean like February 3rd is number 34 in the year?"

Hector Paces Caps

VANCOUVER (CP) — Forward Kevin Hector scored the only goal of the game to lift Vancouver Whitecaps to a 1-0 win over Tampa Bay Rowdies in North American Soccer League play Thursday night.

The wide-open game featured end-to-end action and strong midfield play, where Vancouver's Kember and John Sammels as well as the Rowdies' Wes McLeod stood out.

Whitecaps goalkeeper Phil Parkes, who made six saves, was named the game's outstanding player. Hammond blocked five shots for Tampa Bay.

Both Rodney Marsh of the Rowdies and Vancouver's John Craven were given cautions for rough play. Tampa Bay fouled 30 times compared to 17 for the Whitecaps.

In other games, New York Cosmos whipped Toronto Metro-Croatia 5-1 and Tulsa Roughnecks defeated Houston Hurricanes 4-2.

And Kevin Mabbutt scored the only goal as Bristol City of the English League's First Division defeated Portland Timbers 1-0 in an international exhibition match before a crowd of 8,038 in Portland.

Angels Job To Fregosi

By The Associated Press

Dave Garcia was fired as manager of the California Angels Thursday afternoon after less than a year in that position and replaced by Jim Fregosi.

Fregosi, 36, an original member of the Angels, has been an utility infielder with Pittsburgh Pirates. He will take over as the club's nonplaying manager when they play Boston Red Sox at Anaheim Stadium tonight.

Fregosi becomes the American League team's eighth manager since the team was formed prior to the 1961 season. He follows Bill Rigney, the late Lefty Phillips, Del Rice, Bobby Winkles, Dick Williams, Norm Sherry and Garcia.

In making the announcement that Fregosi would replace Garcia, Gene Autry, Angels president and chairman of the board, said: "We felt the Angels needed more motivation and that Fregosi is the type of individual to fill that bill."

Meanwhile, pitcher Jim Palmer says rumors that Baltimore Orioles might trade him are grossly exaggerated.

In fact, Palmer, who pitched his third straight shutout Thursday in a 1-0 victory over New York Yankees, says he's the source of those rumors.

"I started most of the rumors, so it doesn't affect me," he said.

Regina Job Goes To Pilling

REGINA (CP) — Greg Pilling has been named general manager-coach of the Regina Pats of the Western Canada Hockey League.

Pilling, 34, who was general manager-coach of the International Hockey League Fort Wayne Komets last season, replaces Lorne Davis, who was fired by the six club owners on Wednesday.

Last season, Pilling guided the Komets to a first-place finish in the IHL. The team also made the final playoff series.

D. K. Macpherson, speaking for the Pats' owners said Pilling was given a one-year contract.

"Hopefully he can do both jobs," Macpherson said. "The reports we've had on him are first class."

Lombardi Gets NFL Post As Management Director

NEW YORK (AP) — Vince Lombardi, son of the late National Football League coach, is the new assistant executive director of NFL management council.

Appointment of Lombardi, who has been with Seattle Seahawks since 1975, most recently as director of ticket sales and marketing, was announced Thursday by Paul Sonnabend, new executive director of the management council, bargaining arm of the 28 NFL teams.

MPs' Aides Hit the Bricks in Pay Protest

OTTAWA (CP) — About 50 secretaries, researchers and others who work for members of Parliament abandoned their desks for the pavement outside the Commons today, protesting pay increases they say are too little to cover rising living costs.

The increases, announced Wednesday by Commons Speaker James Jerome, cover about 2,500 House employees — guards, messengers, administrative staff, janitors and parliamentary pages as well as secretaries and researchers.

None belongs to a union. The increases were arranged by Jerome and other members of a House committee on internal economy.

The wage-increase formula adopted by Jerome is designed to raise pay for some employees while keeping a tighter rein on others. An attempt was made to keep the increases in line with pay guides set by the government for raises to public servants.

In the Commons, Walter Baker (Grenville-Carleton), Progressive Conservative House leader, said parliamentary staff morale "has been hurt by the selective and mysterious manner" in which the increases were decided.

Some of the raises are about six per cent. Others are lump-sum raises. The two researchers allowed each of the 264 MPs, for instance, have been given $666 raises, bringing their maximum annual pay to $11,759.

Spokesmen for members of MPs' staff have described the increases as an insult.

"The House of Commons is being operated like a 19th century employer with a paternalistic attitude," says Patrick Walsh, president of the Conservative MPs' staff association.

Thursday, Government House Leader Allan MacEachen said the 2,500 employees will be allowed to join a union.

Touring Some Gracious Homes

You're out driving. You pass a treed garden. You get a glimpse beyond the trees of a gracious home, surrounded by lawns and flower beds.

And, as you drive on, you say to those with you (or if you are alone the thought runs through your mind) that home looks so intriguing you'd like to see what it is like inside.

Well! If you are that sort of a person you are going to have an opprortunity to whet some of your curiousity.

The Women's Committee of the Greater Victoria Art Gallery is planning a bus tour of four attractive country homes you may have seen and admired from the outside, at one time or another.

Date of the tour is Saturday, June 10.

On that day some 20 to 40 buses will leave, at spaced intervals, from the Topaz Avenue and Quadra Street entrance to S.J. Willis Junior Secondary School, commencing at 10:15 a.m. and ending at 3:30 p.m.

Bus tickets may be obtained at the Art Gallery, 1040 Moss Street, telephone 384-4101, or from members of the women's committee.

And, I'm told, low heels will be necessary.

Homes to be visited include Westwind Farm on Noble Road, out Cordova Bay way; Crofton House on the Prospect Lake Road; Donnington Farm on the Pat Bay Highway and the Boivin home on Lands End Road.

Westwind Farm, now occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Terry Johnston, has an intriguing and lengthy history.

The first house was built in 1920 by Capt. Frederick Noble, R.N. (brother of Admiral Sir Percy Noble) for his family of five sons.

Set in 365 acres of treed and meadow land, it was later sold to Archdeacon Dewdney, who lived there for a few years and in that time added a house for his domestic staff.

In 1939, the property, including the farm, was bought by Capt. Massy Goolden, R.N.

He had the old house demolished, but saved the bricks and pre-cut oak for a new one, designed by an architect named Van Norman.

The Gooldens named the place Arlow Farm and during the years they were there, the attractive grounds surrounding the house were setting for at least eight annual symphony garden parties.

A construction company bought the house in 1961 and briefly rented it to people who were discoverd growing marijuana in the kitchen.

Finally it was rescued by the Johnstons who have added an indoor swimming pool and tennis court.

Crofton House, designed in country farm style by architect John Wade and built six years ago, stands high on a hill.

One of the most attractive features of its 16 rooms is the large old-time family kitchen, a gathering place for the four Crofton daughters and their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Pat Crofton.

On its surrounding 60 acres the Croftons raise sheep. Mrs. Crofton dyes and cards the wool and together with her daughters has decorated most of the rooms in imaginiative art and craft designs.

Donnington Farm, home of Mr. and Mrs. Eric Charman, was designed by the late Leonard James (well-known as the Crystal Garden architect) for Mr. and Mrs. Norman Yarrow and their family.

It is built in English Sussex farm style. The interior is 16th and 17th century baroque and the rooms are filled with a collection of noteworthy paintings and many other distinctive works of art.

Ultra-modern, briefly describes the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Boivin, overlooking Salt Spring Island and the Satellite Channel, on Lands End Road.

The house, occupying 2,700 square feet and surrounded by tall cedars and wild ferns, is a superb blend of glass, Jordan River stone and cedar that reflects the essence of west coast living.

Architect Michael Geary designed this home.

Postscript — Many will remember the house tours arranged by the Women's Committee to the Greater Victoria Art Gallery that were so popular back in the 1960s and early 70s.

Now, after a lapse of five years, the idea is being reactivated in this country home bus tour.

Proceeds will go to the art gallery's cultural fund to help the board of directors increase the present outstanding collection.

"With no string attached," says committee president Mrs. M.G. (Pat) Curbishley, "they will use it as they see fit."

Mrs. W.E. (Betty) Parker is in charge of arrangements for the bus tour.

SHORT PEOPLE AGGRESSIVE

TORONTO (CP) — Jodie Oser, founder of Short People of America, says some short persons, tired of being made to feel inadequate, overcompensate by becoming abrasive and aggressive.

Mrs. Oser, a five-foot, 100-pound Cleveland, Ohio, teacher, was in Toronto to see whether there is enough interest to set up a Canadian affiliate of her association.

Mrs. Oser, 22, said she formed the group in February after discovering that other short persons shared her problems — difficulty in finding clothing that would fit, cars that require blocks on the pedals, apartments with sinks and counters at uncomfortable levels and high shelves that require stools to be reached.

She considers men under five feet, six inches and women under five feet, four inches to be short.

Beware Work-at-Home Gyps

By LYNNE GORDON

As money gets tighter, watch for a strong re-appearance of the old, phoney work-at-home rackets with a few new twists.

The elderly and the disabled, even young parents stuck at home with the kids, are especially vulnerable to fast-buck artists' promises of easy ways to make a little extra money.

Usually the work-at-home schemes appear in the classified advertising sections of newspapers and magazines. Since the papers or magazines can't screen all the ads to see which are honest and which are phoney, it's important that you're alert to the danger signals and recognize the rip-offs.

The ads are hard to resist when they tempt you with "great profits for little work;" "guaranteed market for your product;" "no experience necessary." Thousands fall for this kind of bait and the companies bank on the theory that each "sucker" only loses a few bucks and will be too embarrassed to complain to the proper authorities.

The few dollars you lose may not be a fortune but it represents a loss of your hard-earned money, hours of frustration, a dream that never materialized. But it represents millions of dollars to the company.

Let's take a look at some of these rackets so you can learn to ask questions before you get hooked.

The rackets cover anything from crocheted baby booties to bronzed baby shoes, addressing envelopes to laminating news clippings, machine knitting, rug weaving and invisible mending.

The red flag goes up when you're asked to lay out a chunk of money for a work kit that you're expected to assemble in the home. Of course you can only buy the kit from the company.

Another tip-off comes with the phrase: "We will buy the finished product from you if it meets our standards." You believe that there is a ready market for the items, so you buy the equipment and materials and get to work. When the time comes for "approval," you find that this "doesn't meet our standards." You're urged to try again, buy more materials, spend more money. Before long you'll find out that nothing will ever meet their standards and you're in the hole for about $50 or more.

Another way to make a deal with you is to sell you the kits and "hints" on how to go about getting orders for the finished products from stores in your neighborhood. Another dead end. Most stores have established suppliers and are cautious about dealing with an unknown quantity. You may end up trying to peddle your wares at inflated prices to friends and neighbors.

Addressing envelopes seems like a natural work-at-home job. You'll pay about five dollars for information, presuming that the company has outlets for you and all you need to do is send for instructions. You'll get a mimeographed sheet of instructions on how to address envelopes and "tips" on where to sell your services. You'll be advised to "check your neighborhood doctors, lawyers and businessmen." Another dead end. Most firms that have large envelope addressing needs are well equipped with secretaries and machinery that can do the job cheaper than you can in your home.

You can earn extra money in the home but your choices are limited. Legitimate operators will deliver the merchandise to your home at no cost to you and pay for the work they assign. This may include such things as bookkeeping, proof-reading or collating.

Before you take the bait, do your homework and ask yourself these questions:

1. How much is the scheme or "secret" going to cost?
2. What will I purchase and what will I sell?
3. Can I make any money at it? Is there a market for the product? Who does the selling?
4. What does the local Better Business Bureau and the Consumer Protection Bureau know about the scheme?

Work-at-home rackets are legal — they operate just within the law. Fraudulent mail-order operations can be stopped by postal authorities but fraud is hard to prove. The moment one racket has been rooted out, another sprouts in its place under a different name but within the same gimmick.

Because the amount of money may be small, consumers who have been "had" are embarrassed to report the incident to authorities.

Don't be. It's your responsibility to call the Consumer Protection Bureau and the Better Business Bureau. Even if you can't get your money back, you'll help in cleaning up the marketplace.

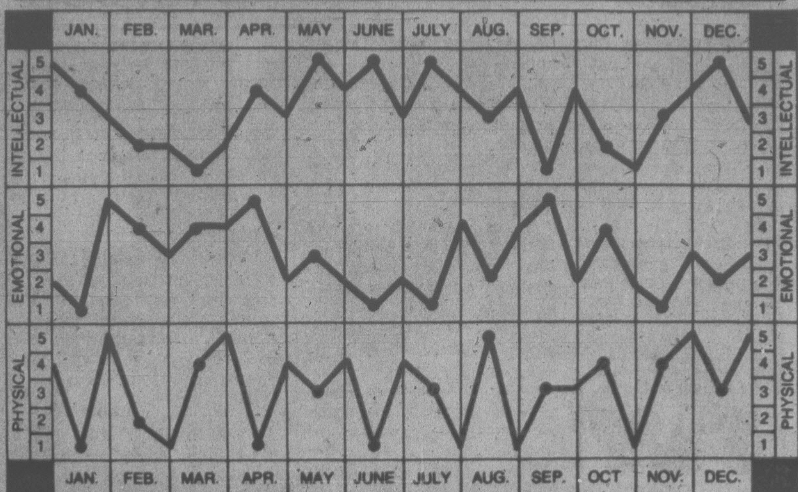
Dist. by Toronto Sun Syndicate



HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle-	Talking too much can get you into trouble. Give your mouth a rest and listen more.
6-10 Neutral Cycle-	Read up on nutrition and make notes. You need to approach your diet more seriously.
11-15 Positive Cycle-	In some ways, things do come more easily to the young. Study opportunities carefully and then act.

A young woman writes that she found it easier to get a job when she was just out of her teens. Doors opened for her easily but she kept her goals short-term and lost interest in a new job quickly. Looking back, she realizes her need for awareness and insight into planning her future. Next time your Bio-dex is high, spend some time on long-range planning.

By L. L. Coleman, M.D.

One of the men in my office stays away from work every few weeks. He says it's because he has "too much blood." He says he must have some of the blood drained off of him. You can imagine how curious we all are. We hesitate to ask him too many questions. Have you heard of anything like this? — Miss A. deV.

Dear Miss deV.:

Your co-worker may be suffering from a condition known as "polycythemia." In simple terms, this is the opposite of anemia, where there is a deficiency of a number of red blood cells.

Polycythemia is a strange disorder that affects the red blood cells. Normally, there are about five million red blood cells per cubic milimetre. Patients with his disorder have double that amount. Along with it, patients complain of fatigue, drowsiness, loss of memory, poor concentration and, in general, a marked inability to perform well at work. Men are more prone than women to polycythemia.

The treatment for this condition is phylebotomy, by which blood is removed at regular intervals in an effort to reduce the red blood cells. Radioactive phosphorus and X-ray treatments to the bone marrow are given to reduce the over-production of red blood cells for the bone marrow is the chief source of the manufacture of all red blood cells.

Traditional Coats Making Comeback

By BERNADINE MORRIS

NEW YORK — Nobody's paid much attention to serious coats in the last few years, but that's changing now. Things are looking up . . .

When the blue-jean era finally began to wane, women turned to skirts and shirts, or skirts and sweaters as they started to accept more formal clothing. Then dresses returned to the fashion orbit. When the fall season rolls around, it will be clear that coats have a place in the firmament, too.

"It goes together with the return of the shoulder pad," observed Kasper. The designer of dresses for Joan Leslie and sportswear for J. L. Sport has recently added a coat collection to the raincoats and storm coats he makes for Weatherscope. It is a sign of Seventh Avenue's new preoccupation with coat styles.

The shoulder pad has indeed been responsible for the return of the more structured coat for next fall and winter. For the last several seasons designers have concentrated on myraid ponchos, blankets, shawls and capes as the last piece of apparel to put on before venturing out into the cold.

The pads are not necessarily of the monstrous or gargantuan variety.

"I just use them to enable the coat to hang straight from the shoulders and not fall into the body," observed John Anthony. His coats are of the unlined variety and he covers the shoulder pads in the same fabric as the coat to make them as unobtrusive as possible.

The collection of coat

The coat renaissance was apparent as the first fall collection made their debut in Milan two months ago. The Italian designers, who have always had a good grasp of tailoring, turned out an astonishing array of wide, narrow and traditional shapes, such as the double-breasted reefer or the trench coat. Coats with fur or fake fur linings, reversible styles and a new emphasis on three-quarter lengths made it immediately apparent that something dramatic was happening to coat styling.

The French ready-to-wear collections reinforced the point, and when the Seventh Avenue showings began it was clear that designers on both sides of the Atlantic have concentrated on coats.

When it comes time to pick their winter coat from the store racks, women will have a wider choice of styles than they've had in years. There are plenty of wide smocklike styles alongside the newer, slimmer tailored models, but designers point out that there is plenty of room even in the slender styles.

The range of fabrics is as extensive as the styles, and includes luxury cashmeres, fluffy mohairs and sturdy meltons. Almost every designer has made up at least one plaid coat for the woman who likes to be noticed.

The return to the traditional coat will be welcomed by women who have had trouble clutching free-flowing capes, handbags, tote bags and a couple of parcels on a gusty December day. Along with the big interest in furs, the cloth coat revival should make it easier for women to cope with yet another cold winter . . .

DEAR READERS: Gambling is not simply a "weakness" — it's an illness for which treatment is available in Gamblers Anonymous. And for the family and close friends of the compulsive gambler there is a group called "Gam-Anon."

The following questions may help you to decide whether you are involved with someone who is a compulsive gambler:

1. Are you haunted by bill collectors?

2. Is the person in question often away from home for long, unexplained periods of time?

3. Do you feel that he or she cannot be trusted with money?

4. Does he or she promise faithfully to stop gambling; beg, plead for another chance, yet gamble again and again?

5. Does he or she borrow money to gamble with or to pay gambling debts?

6. Have you noticed a personality change in the gambler as his or her gambling has progressed?

7. Have you come to the point of hiding money needed for living expenses, knowing that you and the rest of the family may go without food and clothing if you do not?

8. Do you search the gambler's clothing or go through his wallet when the opportunity presents itself, or otherwise check on his or her activities?

9. Does the gambler hide his or her money?

10. Does the gambler lie sometimes compulsively, avoid any discussion of his or her debts, or refuse to face the realities of the situation?

11. Does the gambler shift the responsibility for his or her gambling upon you, or try to make you feel guilty?

12. Do you attempt to anticipate the gambler's moods, or try to control his or her life?

13. Do you feel that your life together is a nightmare?

If you have answered "yes" to six or more of these questions, I urge you to contact Gam-Anon. It's free, and there is nothing to "join." It's simply a fellowship of men and women who are relatives and close friends of compulsive gamblers. There you will learn effective ways of coping with the gambling problems from those who have lived through it.

For more information about this wonderfully supportive group, write to: Gamblers Anonymous, P.O. Box 17173, Los Angeles, Calif. 90017.

It is a non-profit group, so please enclose 15 U.S. cents and a self-addressed envelope for their reply.

Money from Home While Overseas

Youth on the Move

By LUCY IZON

Money from home! That, no matter how well you plan your big trip overseas, is something you may end up needing in a hurry. Here are a few tips on arranging to receive it.

If, while abroad, you realize you will need money but can get by for a few more weeks, you have two alternatives. If you still have a live bank acount back home, you can write directly to your bank and ask it to transfer funds to a correspondent bank in Europe. Include your account number, amount to be transferred, arrival city and your European address so the bank can notify you.

If you do not have money in an account and are relying on friends or family, you should write to them and give them your arrival city and European address for notification. Both these methods take a minimum of two weeks.

Your best bet is to make your delivery arrangements for a major city on your itinerary. Ask the foreign bank you use if they have "correspondent relationship" with your bank back home. If you deal with a bank that has this set-up, you save using another bank as a middleman, which would prolong the process of getting your money.

If you need your money right away, have a major European bank cable your hometown bank. The cost of the cable would be about $10.

The other alternative is to call a friend or relative collect and give them the name and address of the bank you want the funds sent to. They go to a bank here and have the funds sent. Both these methods take two days to a week. Again, it is advisable to choose a European bank that has a correspondence status with your home bank.

When you're really in trouble and, have a valid reason such as theft, the nearest Canadian Embassy may lend you some money to get you by for several days while you wait for your money to arrive.

If the embassy agrees to assist you, it will take your passport and hold it until the loan is repaid, or will put you in contact with local agencies that will help you get by during those few days with food and a place to sleep.

A Life-Size Spoof on TV

SEATTLE (AP) — You have never seen a TV set quite like it.

It is life-size, and its screen spews out a Chinese Six Dollar Man, a black Marvel Woman, a female newscaster named Jean Earnsalot and a black host for a game show called White Is Never Right.

The spoof on real television is part of a play called In Living Color, produced for Seattle school children by the Hard Times Theatre, a multiracial company of professional actors.

Written by Hard Times administrator Stephanie Ross, the 30-minute show is packed with mock violence, comedy and messages on race relations and TV viewing habits.

"Turn off your TV," the actors urge from inside the huge television set. "Look for your super heroes out there, not in here."

The play has been presented to about 20 schools, due to begin a mandatory desegregation busing program next year.

Male Intuition?

NORTON, Mass. (AP) — Anthropologist Margaret Mead says the opposite sex is beginning to acquire that mysterious trait known as "feminine intuition."

Ms. Mead, awarded an honorary degree at Wheaton College's commencement exercises Friday, said feminine intuition is nothing more than "paying attention to other people."

As men become more involved in child care, they develop the same sort of sensitivity, she said.

MOTHER EARTH NEWS

Beating the Heat With Fruit Juices

As the days grow longer and warmer, your thoughts will naturally turn to ways to quench your thirst. In the following article, MOTHER reader Rosemary Vavrin offers some recipes for warm-weather drinks made with fruit juices.

When it's a warm day and you're thirsty, can anything be more satisfying than a generous glass of chilled fruit juice?

If that "tall, cool one" is freshly squeezed, so much the better. And if it happens to be a blend of several different juices, you're talking about a refreshment that approaches the sublime!

Some of the following recipes call for the help of that vesatile kitchen appliance, the blender. All are tried-and-true formulas that never fail to bring me compliments from my guests.

SUNSHINE

2 cups apple juice
1 cup apricot nectar
1 cup lemonade
1 cup pineapple juice
1 cup orange juice
Cinnamon and nutmeg to taste

Stir all ingredients together until they're thoroughly combined, and pour over ice cubes. (Be sure to make plenty of this one — it goes fast!)

PURPLE DELIGHT

4 cups purple grape juice
2 cups lemonade
2 cups pineapple juice

Combine ingredients thoroughly and serve over ice. Exquisite!

MORNING OPENER

2 cups orange juice
1 cup lemonade
1 cup pineapple juice
Honey to taste

APPLE DELIGHT

4 cups apple juice or cider
1 cup lemonade
2 apples, peeled and cored

Blend each apple with one cup of the apple juice or cider until it's liquefied. Stir in the remainder of the apple juice and the lemonade and serve over ice. I'm sure you'll enjoy the unusually "fresh" taste of this one!

RED GLOW

2 cups pineapple juice
1 pint strawberries
1 tablespoon honey

Blend half the strawberries with one cup of the pineapple juice. Repeat this procedure with the other half, combine everything and stir in the honey. Serve this yummy drink ice cold.

SUNFLOWER

2 cups tangerine juice
1 cup pineapple juice
1 ripe banana

Blend the banana into the pineapple juice, then mix the resulting liquid well with the tangerine juice and serve over ice. Heavenly!

NECTAR DELIGHT

2 cups apricot nectar
2 cups peach nectar
2 cups pear nectar
2 tablespoons honey

Combine all ingredients thoroughly. If you wish, whole peaches or appricots (peeled, pitted and sliced) can be whirled in the blender and added. Serve over ice. Truly a nectar of the gods!

Prune Clematis for Blooms

One day this past week several fine red flowers caught my attention as the rising sun lit up the branches of a somewhat distant neighboring tree. Remembering that Clematis 'Ernest Markham' had been planted in the spot about 20 years ago it was left at that for identification.

But it continued to bother my mind because 'Ernest Markham' is a late bloomer, from July to October, and here it was with lovely rich blooms well before the end of May.

Garden puzzles have a way of remaining in my mind even though it is fully occupied with other matters. Frequently the subconscious works on the problem for me, bringing the answer to the surface without warning.

So it was with the clematis puzzle. The plant had not been pruned for several years, nor had there been more than a token few flowers scattered through summer. This year the ripened new growths of last summer were producing an early crop of flowers.

This seems an interesting point to bring before gardeners who grow both the early flowering and the late flowering clematises. If the plants initially were chosen for their blending colors as is usually the case, it is possible to have an early variety like 'Nelly Moser' bloom with the first crop on the late summer variety pink 'Hagley Hybrid' or the purple 'Jackmanni'.

The late flowers on 'Hagley Hybrid' and 'Jackmanni' can also be enjoyed by the method of relay pruning. This I later found explained in a little book on celmatis by an English specialist grower, J. Fisk, suggesting that by cutting back half the plant in March, leaving the other half unpruned, the unpruned half will begin flowering in May with even larger blooms.

The new wood produced during summer on the half that was cut back will produce masses of smaller flowers from late July until frost puts an end to the display.

If you like the effect of the one plant having flowers from May to October, you reverse the pruning each year by cutting back the opposite half of the celmatis plant. You then have one plant in bloom all season.

The naturally early flowering 'Nelly Moser' does well without pruning if it has plenty of space to cover without becoming a tangle.

If it must be limited, do the thinning and training promptly after most of the flowers fade, being careful to leave plenty of this year's flowering stems to produce short side growths during summer for next spring's enormous blooms.

Even as the roses, the clematis has been called the Queen of Flowers. It can be grown in the smallest garden, a balcony garden, a roof garden or a patio garden, or it may clothe old trees in a large garden much as tapestries decorate vast expanses of indoor walls.

Wherever it is used, clematis is lovely.

ONCE UPON A TIME

So the story goes, there was a little home on Edgeware Street close to Simpsons Sears Hillside which needed tender and loving care. One day along came a family and they painted and carpentered and added a family room with a Franklin stove and the little 3 bedroom home became bigger and happier. Now the family is moving away and they want to sell it for $49,900.00 so that you and the house and the separate garage can live happily ever after. ML 31962. Pat Parker 388-4455.

HOW TO WRITE

A GOOD

CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale: start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your adveertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Friday; 8:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

Exercise to Test Sea Rescue Skills

A simulated air crash will take place near the Fairway Buoy, about four miles off Victoria, on Saturday morning, dumping 20 people in the water.

In the exercise the people will simulate various states, such as death and unconsciousness.

They will finally be rescued and taken to the Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Starting around 8:30 a.m., the exercise is expected to take about four hours.

The exercise, which is to be televised, has been arranged by SAF (Stay Afloat), a volunteer rescue organization which was formed May 15. Two of the organizers are SAF marine chief Cliff Philpot and assistant marine chief Bob Charlesoworth.

The organization now has 402 volunteer boats, 131 shore monitors and five aircraft.

The 20 people to be rescued Saturday will be taken to the Fairway Buoy in boats from which they will go over the side into the water.

Among the SAF boats standing by will be The Alley Cat, a 23-foot cabin cruiser owned by Ken Ward. Ward, a diver, will have three other divers aboard — Sandy Gunnerson, Dave Hicks and Mike Pease.

Ward explained today that a small boat will first go out, spot the assumed disaster and report it. Ward will be notified and despatched to the scene from the West Bay Marina in Esquimalt.

He and his companions will rescue the people in the water, who will then be taken ashore to the marina where ambulance facilities will be waiting.

Ward says the SAF exercise has been arranged to emphasise the need for better marine rescue facilities and the need to co-ordinate all agencies.

"There are more than a quarter of a million boats in the lower end of Vancouver Island and Vancouver," he said. "We have a very sparce (official) marine rescue service and we (SAF) get no government support at all."

Ward said the reason he joined SAF was because, as a boater, he was fed up with watching Canadians having to rely on U.S. Coast Guard helicopters and cutters in times of emergency.

He said one SAF member had helped out a total of 120 boaters in one year.

Unity Plea By Churches

A mass church service for Canadian unity will be held at 3 p.m. Sunday, June 25, on the lawn of the legislature, the Victoria branch of the Council for Canadian Unity said today.

All faiths have been invited to the service and attendance may top 3,000, said council spokesman Brian Small.

Bishop Remi De Roo of St. Andrew's Cathedral will conduct the service.

Several hundred people will be participating in the event, including the 100-member Metropolitan church choir plus bands from Naden and the Salvation Army.

Boy Scout and Girl Guide groups have also been invited.

Small said invitations have also gone to the premier as well as local mayors and other officials.

He said Victoria Mayor Mike Young has agreed to read a proclamation.

The event will launch national unity week which runs from June 25 to July 1, Canada Day.

National Film Board movies on Canadian themes will be shown in McPherson Theatre during the week, sponsored by the Inter-Cultural Association.

BLENCOE WINS SOME BRUISES

Rookie Victoria Ald. Robin Blencoe picked up some political bruises Thursday in a losing fight to have the city establish an environmental advisory committee.

The relatively inexperienced alderman was shot down by Mayor Mike Young in a nose-to-nose battle.

Blencoe said during a parks and recreation committee meeting that an environmental committee was badly needed to advise council on city projects that might have an adverse affect on the environment.

Young strongly opposed that view, however, saying that Blencoe's plan would only add to an already overlarge bureaucracy.

"I'm surprised at your attitude," Blencoe said to the mayor. "I don't think we can stick our head in the sand."

He said that council seeks advice from committees on traffic, planning and heritage matters, and should do so on something as important as the environment.

Young replied that there were plenty of experts available to give the city advice should it be needed. A committee would only mean more paper work for everyone concerned, he added.

But Blencoe, visibly upset with the mayor's opposition, fired back that environmental concerns were serious and should be dealt with by an established committee, and not on an ad hoc basis.

"I'm very disatisfied with your attitude, your worship, it's very sad," said Blencoe.

Ald. Bill Tindall, the only other committee member present, remained silent through most the debate but finally sided with the mayor.

"The fact that someone disagrees with your point of view doesn't mean he's sticking his head in the sand," said Tindall.

PM Backs Macdonald

By PAUL WHITELAW
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau says the naming of former cabinet minister Donald Macdonald to the board of McDonnell-Douglas won't give the American company a "preferred position" in bidding for a $2.3 billion Canadian fighter plane contract.

Trudeau told the Commons Thursday that government conflict-of-interest guidelines "have not been contravened in any way" by the controversial appointment.

Macdonald resigned as finance minister last summer and quit his Commons seat early this year to join a Toronto law firm with a stable of blue chip corporate clients.

NDP leader Ed Broadbent rejected Trudeau's defence of his former cabinet minister, saying Macdonald's directorship would give McDonnell-Douglas an inside track in bidding for the biggest single government contract in Canadian history.

Broadbent said the appointment is "a violation of the principle or spirit" of the conflict-of-interest guidelines, even if Macdonald had done nothing wrong.

MP Ray Hnatyshyn, the Conservative's deputy house leader, also criticized Macdonald and called on the government to bring in "more stringent" rules to govern the outside business activities of onetime cabinet ministers and senior public servants.

Trudeau maintained the government was "specific in the guidelines in spelling out a certain number of rules which should not be broken."

Macdonald, he said, had "not broken the letter or the spirit of the guidelines."

Guidelines issued in December, 1976 state that former ministers and senior officials should have no dealings with their former departments or agencies until two years after leaving government service. In addition, they should not accept positions with private firms with which they had dealings for one year.

On April 24 of this year, an appendix to the guidelines was issued warning cabinet ministers and senior officials not to grant privileged access or preferential treatment to former colleagues acting on behalf of private corporations.

Trudeau noted that had Macdonald accepted a directorship, for instance, of a bank after serving as finance minister, opposition MP's "would be right" to cry conflict-of-interest.

Mair Names Liquor Czar

Bob Wallace, a career public servant, today was named general manager of the province's Liquor Distribution Branch.

Wallace, 54, replaces Keith Warrens who resigned in early February over what was described as a difference of opinion with senior ministry officials over security messures in the distribution system.

Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair said he expects Wallace to put the administration of the branch back on its feet after the recent problems. He starts work July 1.

Wallace served as deputy minister of agriculture, of mines, resources and environmental management and of northern affairs in Manitoba between 1967 and 1973 as well as secretary to the cabinet committee on priorities and planning.

He then became assistant chief statistician for Canada with a mandate to reorganize the census and other data gathering functions.

Mair said Wallace brings with him an expertise in labor-management relations, which coupled with his good technical knowledge should improve morale in the branch.

The branch has been under fire since early this year when it was discovered large quantities of liquor — perhaps as much $1 million worth — were being siphoned out of the main LCB warehouse in Vancouver.

A police investigation turned up no evidence of wrongdoing by staff, but both Mair and his deputy said they wanted security improved in the warehouse and a better system of controlling inventory.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 28-year-old Saanich man arrested by members of the Greater Victoria police emergency response team early Wednesday morning appeared in Victoria provincial court in the afternoon and was charged with possession of a dangerous weapon and mischief causing wilful damage.

Martin John Trowsdale, 944 Tattersall, was brought before Judge William Ostler and charged with possession of a rifle and damaging an auto belonging to Wayne Brian Trowsdale, believed to be his brother.

He was arrested after rifle shots were heard in the Tattersall and Savannah neighborhood shortly after 2 a.m.

Police have determined that the man had been involved in a fight at the Red Lion Inn beer parlor and had received some bruises and cuts in the altercation.

In court, Trowsdale appeared in a somewhat battered condition and asked if he could have some time to contact his lawyer.

Crown counsel Nicholas Lang said he would be opposing Trowsdale's release and Ostler remanded Trowsdale until this morning for bail hearing and possible election of trial method on both charges.

Hany Fahmy, 21, was charged with the April 10 break-in at International Knives, 574 Yates, during which eight handguns were stolen.

All eight weapons were found recently, buried in various areas around Shawnigan Lake and along the Malahat portion of the Trans Canada Highway.

Fahmy, who gave police addresses of 9724 Fourth Street in Sidney and 4290 Dieppe, was charged with breaking and entering, possession of stolen property and possession of marijuana.

Defence-lawyer Ken Walton told the court Fahmy is presently in the midst of changing addresses. Walton elected trial by judge without jury on the first two charges and Tamara Stomp, representing Fahmy on the drug charge, asked for one week before entering a plea.

Ostler ordered Fahmy's release on his own recognizance in the sum of $2,000 on conditions that he obey an 11 p.m. nightly curfew and not reside at the Sidney address.

Fahmy's 18-year-old brother, Bahaa El-Din, also appeared before Ostler and was charged with possession of stolen stereo equipment and possession of marijuana. Lang told the court the stereo equipment, valued at $2,350, is alleged to have been taken in a May 14 break-in in Duncan.

He was ordered released on $1,000 recognizance and on the condition he not reside at the Fourth Street address.

Both were remanded until next Thursday.

Bruce Douglas Jefferies, 18, of no fixed address, was charged with breaking and entering in connection with a break-in Thursday morning at the Esquimalt branch of the Greater Victoria Public Library, 1153 Esquimalt Road.

Legal-aid lawyer Brian MacKenzie asked for a one-week remand before election and Jefferies was ordered released on $500 recognizance on condition that he obey an 11 p.m. nightly curfew.

"You have the dubious distinction of having one of the highest readings in this court in some time," Ostler told a 29-year-old unemployed marine biologist.

Terrence Ronald Andrews, who said he was in the process of moving to Trail, pleaded guilty to a charge of impaired driving May 14.

Lang told the court that Andrews, who lived at 909 McClure, was driving south on the Island Highway shortly before 9 p.m. when his van went through a guardrail near the Thetis Lake overpass and ended up 30 feet down an embankment.

Lang said three tests, one more than usual, produced readings of .40, .40 and .37 before police decided to take him to Royal Jubilee Hospital for medical attention.

Outside the courtroom, Lang said that .30 usually produces a state of alcohol comatose.

He said that Andrews at first insisted he had had only six beers and then revised that to four beers before later admitting he had been on a four-day binge.

Ostler levied a $600 fine after making his comment to Andrews.

Also fined for drinking-driving were: Jody Coward, 26, of 10150 Third Street in Sidney, $450; Neil Wilson, 52, of 1101 Hilda, $400; and David Young Russell, 32, of 7227 Veyaness, $350.

Following a lengthy legal battle over a breath-test reading, 64-year-old Arthur George Luney, 1450 Beach, was found guilty of driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 on May 24, 1977.

He was fined $400 by Green who gave a written judgment on the case Wednesday.

Trio of Grads Fight Back

A few rotten apples shouldn't be allowed to spoil the reputation of the others, three Esquimalt high school students believe, so they're making the rounds to repudiate a retiring teacher's criticism.

Physics teacher F. Val Hinch recently told a television interviewer the bad habits and attitude of his students are part of the reason he is quitting in June.

In a letter to the B.C. Teachers' Federation, Hinch said many of his students avoid work, have no ambition and abuse themselves with alcohol, tobacco and drugs.

The three graduating students are determined to redeem the school's good name as a parting gift to future students.

Jane Batt, Dave Angrove and Dave Street are speaking out on behalf of the students with the blessings of the rest of the staff at Esquimalt high school.

Armed with a collection of testimonials from local service organizations and charities, they are going on a local news media blitz to give their school some favorable publicity.

They want Victoria to know they are proud of their school and its accomplishments during the past year.

Not only are the majority of students responsible people, they have hundreds of hours of community work to their credit.

For every bad student, there are plenty of hard-working ones who contribute a lot to the school but never get any recognition, the group says.

They don't think its fair that one teacher's opinion can jeopardize that good name.

The students are proud of Esquimalt High and they think Victoria should be, too.

Sooke Trustee Resigns

Mrs. Ward notified the board May 15 she intends to resign July 3.

Her husband Thomas Ward is suing her for divorce and names Sooke school superintendent Brian Johnston as correspondent in the action.

However, Mrs. Ward said Thursday the divorce case is not the reason for her resignation.

She said she is resigning for personal reasons and refused further comment.

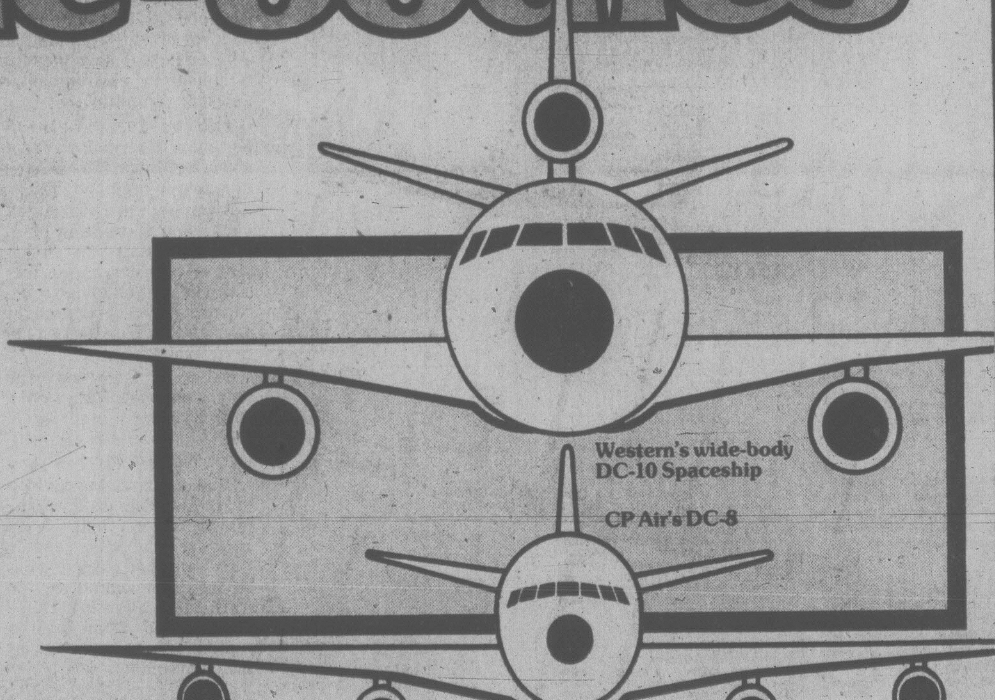
A byelection doesn't have to be called if a trustee resigns after July 1 on the last year of the term.

Mrs. Ward was elected to the board in 1976. Johston, a former school superintendent in Trail, came to Sooke district last summer.

Shippers' Grant

The Okanagan Federated Shippers' Association has been given a $120,000 federal-provincial grant to help in the development and testing of a color defect sorting machine for fruit and vegetables, the two governments said Thursday.

Wide-bodies



Only Western has them to Hawaii.

Western's wide-body DC-10 Spaceships between Vancouver and Hawaii have more spacious cabins. So you get more stretch-out comfort than our competition gives you.

But that's not the only thing wide about our service to Hawaii.

We offer a wide variety of in-flight amenities – our fabulous Islander Service,® complimentary beverages, and the only movies and stereo to the Islands (nominal charge in Coach).

As if all this weren't enough, Western is the only airline to Hawaii with a simplified check-in service. And a convenient mid-morning departure that saves you fighting the rush-hour battle on the way to the airport,

Wide-bodies and wide service, too. That's Western to to Hawaii!

Airlift of Legionnaires Set

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The United States will airlift the remaining French Legionnaires out of Zaire over the next 24 hours and also plans to fly in the first all-African peace-keeping force the French are trying to assemble, officials said Thursday night.

The evacuation of the Legionnaires was described as a "definite" plan, presumably involving U.S. Air Force C-130 and C-141 transport planes, while the airlift of the African replacement was characterized as "tentative."

"The French are clearly taking the lead in this," said one source Thursday night in describing the current effort to assemble a force of Moroccans, Sengalese and other Africans to keep the peace in Zaire.

Representatives from Belgium, Britain, France, the United States and West Germany are scheduled to meet in Paris on Monday to discuss ways to organize a pan-African force.

French Foreign Minister Louis de Guiringaud told The Washington Post on Monday that Presidents Jimmy Carter of the U.S. and Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France had agreed the previous Friday to help African nations against "destabilizing external forces."

In contrast to the French who hope to replace their Legionnaires with Africans in Zaire, Belgium announced Thursday that it was sending fresh troops there to replace its 600 paratroopers in Shaba Province.

Meanwhile, President Mobutu Sese Seko of Zaire has reportedly threatened to break diplomatic relations with Belgium over Belgian press reports of rebellions in northeastern Zaire, far from Shaba province.

In addition to his troubles in northeastern Zaire, Mobutu may have a third revolt in the centre of his country. This time there was no report of foreign involvement.

U.S. Readying Tough Action Against Cuba

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is thinking about beaming propaganda broadcasts into Cuba in an attempt to spread dissatisfaction among the population over the regime's military role in Africa, U.S. officials say.

The White House also is considering suspension of U.S. charter flights to the island and a cancellation of athletic-exchange programs for a similar purpose.

The serious consideration of these measures represents a reversal of what had been steady progress toward resumption of relations between the United States and Cuba, a process that reached a high point nine months ago when the two countries opened diplomatic missions in Washington and Havana.

The administration has no intention of closing down these missions, and it has rejected as "much too extreme" a proposal to blockade Russian oil shipments to Cuba, said the officials, who asked not to be named.

The officials admit that U.S. leverage over Cuba is minimal, and that they do not expect adoption of any of the measures to have a dramatic impact on President Fidel Castro's foreign policy. But the officials say the measures would underscore the depth of U.S. concern about Cuban involvement in African tribal disputes.

There are an estimated 38,000 to 40,000 Cuban troops and advisers in Africa, most of them in Angola and Ethiopia.

The state department estimates that U.S. tourism to Cuba will generate almost $3 million in foreign exchange for the island this year.

ALASKA WARNING

OLYMPIA (AP) — Washington Governor Dixy Lee Ray and Alaska Governor Jay Hammond said in a statement Thursday that people who travel to Alaska looking for high-paying construction jobs probably will lose their savings.

Hammond asked Ray's help in alerting Washington residents that the next major construction in his state — building the Alaska Highway natural gas pipeline across Alaska through Canada and into the American Midwest — won't begin before 1980.

LOOT FOUND IN SIDNEY

More than $10,000 worth of stolen property was recovered Wednesday when members of the Joint Forces Operation of the Co-Ordinated Law Enforcement Unit raided a residence in Sidney.

Insp. Lorne Shandley, officer in charge, said the recovered loot included $4,000 worth of stereo equipment that had been stolen in Duncan in mid-May, as well as $6,500 worth of parts stripped from three motorcycles stolen in Victoria early last month.

Shandley said the frames of the motorcycles were found in the water off Ogden Point by divers Tuesday.

Four persons were expected to appear in court today charged with possession of stolen property.

Jingle Bells, Jingle...

There are about 200 shopping days left until Christmas, but Victoria city council's downtown economic development committee Thursday approved the expenditure of about $20,000 on Christmas decorations.

The committee endorsed a proposal from the Downtown Victoria Association to spruce up the city this winter.

The association said existing plastic holly decorations are becoming worn out and will probably fall apart after one more season.

The association recommended purchasing 60 new holly units at a price of about $326 each for a total cost of $19,590.

The new decorations will highlight the corners and intersections of the streets downtown as well as decorate two blocks on Yates Street.

The association submitted pictures of the Christmas decorations it wanted to see purchased, but committee members weren't impressed.

"They're too garish," said Ald. Robin Blencoe.

70 Campers Ill, Probe Planned

About 70 people in the Capital Regional District have suffered acute stomach upset with the suspected source being a private campsite on Cowichan Lake.

Regional health officer Dr. Allan Arneil, in a news release, says all those affected were at the same campground during the May 24 holiday weekend.

A more comprehensive investigation will be carried out by public health officials during the next few days by phoning others who may have visited the campsite during the holiday weekend.

Anyone concerned about the authenticity of a phone call can phone the regional health office at 388-4421.

GOV'T BILL PROPOSES GAS TAX

Transit Cost Levy Switched to City

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Victoria and Vancouver will be forced to share costs of their bus systems with the provincial government under legislation introduced today in the legislature.

The B.C. Urban Transit Authority Act, which sets up a Crown corporation to run urban transit throughout the province, gives Victoria and Vancouver authority to tax electricity bills and gasoline to help pay the added costs.

The new transit authority will take the operation of the buses out of the hands of B.C. Hydro when it is fully implemented in a year or two.

The province will participate in some of the cost of setting up and operating the municipal bus systems, but Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis indicated much of the burden will be borne by the municipalities.

The legislation provides for cities to increase property taxes, and Greater Victoria and Greater Vancouver will also be allowed to surcharge power bills and add three cents a gallon tax on gasoline.

Mayor Mike Young, who was at the legislature when the bill was introduced, said "the honeymoon has come to an end as far as Victoria's public transportation is concerned."

Young said it didn't appear to be good news for Victoria and Vancouver.

"They've been given a losing proposition."

Hydro's losses in transit are expected to reach $62 million in this fiscal year.

Young said he wonders if there will be an accompanying reduction in Hydro electricity rates once the corporation is rid of the transit operations.

Chairman of the Capital Region Jim Campbell said he's encouraged by the fact that transportation is put in the hands of local authorities, but whether the legislation is good or bad depends on the amount of the provincial contribution to the scheme.

Participation in the new authority is mandatory for Victoria and Vancouver. They cannot opt out, Curtis said.

The minister would not be more specific on the amount of the provincial contribution but he did say it will be "generous, responsible and ongoing."

Jetfoil Trial Proposed

Washington State Ferries wants to operate a Boeing jetfoil service between Seattle and Victoria on a six-week trial basis starting in July.

Nevel Hunter, manager of marketing and service planning in Seattle, said today he is looking for suitable docking sites in Seattle and Victoria. The state's transport commission will have to approve the trial.

It is proposed to run two two-hour trips a day, one leaving Seattle at 9:30 a.m. and the other departing from Victoria at 2 p.m.

Proposed fares are $19 for a single trip and $35 for a return trip.

The jetfoil can carry 250 passengers.

FT. NELSON FOLK FAVOR ALTA. MOVE

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The majority of Fort Nelson residents polled in a recent Chamber of Commerce survey indicated they were so dissatisfied with services in British Columbia that they would consider joining Alberta, chamber president Len Shmelyck said Thursday.

The poll was originally taken to determine whether people would be willing to join Alberta if the B.C. Railway's Fort Nelson extension was shut down.

Shmelyck said about 75 per cent of the more than 100 replies received to date favor breaking away from B.C. because of the poor services provided by Prince George and Vancouver.

Bomb on Bus Kills Six

Times News Services

JERUSALEM — A bomb made from a mortar shell today killed six Israelis and wounded more than 20 others on a bus carrying Sabbath eve shoppers home.

Four persons were killed immediately and two more died in hospital. More than 20 were wounded, some of them critically, by the blast in a Jerusalem suburb.

The bomb was fashioned from an 81mm mortar shell, police said.

The Palestine Liberation Organization in Beirut issued a statement claiming responsibility for the bombing. The statement, distributed by the Palestinian news agency WAFA, did not say which guerrilla faction of the PLO carried out the attagk.

The blast occurred shortly after 1 p.m. as the bus turned a corner into the affluent Bayit Vegan neighborhood of West Jerusalem, just opposite Yad Vashem, Israel's memorial to the six million Jewish victims of the Nazi holocaust.

The blast was so powerful it blew off the rear of the vehicle, curled up the roof and splintered the windshield of a bus following behind.

James Island Shutdown Shocker

Canadian Industries Ltd. will close its nitroglycerine dynamite manufacturing plant on James Island Sept. 30, laying off 96 men.

About six are elgible for early retirment but the remaining 90 are looking for new employment.

Union spokesman Larry Smith today said the closure is "a shock, a terrible shock."

He said rumors of a closure had been circulating for several months but workers had not expected it to come so soon.

"We knew the plant would close eventually but we didn't expect it would be this soon."

Smith said the Oil, Chemical, Atomic Workers International would meet with Canada Manpower and local employers in hopes of finding alternative jobs in the Greater Victoria area if possible.

"This has happened so quickly we have not had time to make any plans but we are getting on it right away."

James Island, off the east coast just south of Sidney, will be retained by CIL as an explosives distribution point and will employ about five people.

Works manager Grant Macpherson said the Island will go into a holding operation for some months, possibly several years, and then industrial activities may expand once again.

The problem, he said, is many mining companies are manufacturing slurry explosives at their mining sites.

This has cut sharply into the demand for nitroglycerine explosives, which are manufactured at James Island.

Some nitroglycerine dynamite will continue to be sold through James Island but it will come from large CIL plants in Ontario and Quebec. It will come across Canada by train and then by barge to James Island.

A CIL subsidiary, Continental Explosives Ltd., will operate on the Island, distributing the dynamite to customers. It will also manufacture ammonium nitrate-fuel oil explosives there but it will be a small operation.

Macpherson said CIL may begin manufacturing slurry explosives within a few years but the plant will be elsewhere in B.C. The explosives will be shipped to James Island, which may grow as a distribution centre.

The James Island explosives plant was founded in 1913. There had been a small community on the Island until 1962 when residents were moved to Sidney or Central Saanich.

The closure means the remaining employees may be permitted to live on James

French Program Ready

British Columbia's school districts were told Thursday they will be required to provide the core curriculum in the French language to all British Columbians who wish to be taught exclusively in French starting in September, 1979.

Education Minister Pat McGeer told the legislature the core curriculum in French, which he said is part of the government's policy to build national unity and the Canadian dream, is complete and now is available.

McGeer said that organization of the curriculum at the local level would be difficult, even though materials are available, so the districts would be asked during the coming year to implement the core curriculum where numbers warrant.

"We're going to give them a year of shaking down and organization and then we're going to say — a year from September — you must in your district provide it if the numbers are there asking for it," McGeer said.

McGeer said his ministry is putting emphasis on scholarship, attendance, development of programs for the gifted, decreasing vandalism and improved articulation between secondary and post-secondary institutions.

Greater Victoria school board vice-chairman Pete Dorazio said today McGeer's plan to implement the French core curriculum on demand will have little effect in this district.

"It's a good idea, it's timely; but it will have no significant impact on the system because the demand will not be great," he said.

Canada Expels U.S. Trollers

Times News Services

OTTAWA — United States fishing vessels must be out of Canadian waters by Sunday noon because the government has reached the conclusion a satisfactory fisheries agreement with the U.S. cannot be implemented, External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson said today.

Jamieson told the Commons he had informed the U.S. ambassador, Thomas Enders, the closure was the most "appropriate means of maintaining a balance between the fishing interests of the two nations."

It may not, however, be possible to get all U.S. fishing vessels out of Canadian waters by the deadline, an official of the U.S. National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said.

Carmen Blondin, deputy director, international fisheries affairs, said in a Washington interview that communications problems may make a speedy withdrawal of fishing boats difficult.

Blondin said there are about 20 U.S. vessels now in Canadian waters off the east coast and 30 to 40 off the west coast.

He said that although the U.S. would do whatever it could to meet Ottawa's deadline, Sunday is "rather short notice."

"We had hoped there would be a longer period involved," he said. "I frankly doubt that this (meeting the deadline) will be possible."

Blondin, a former coast guard officer, said it often takes considerable time to contact all boats and inform them of withdrawals. And once they are all notified, they still have to sail home.

He added that he expects Canada will recall its fishing boats now in U.S. waters and estimated that at any time there are between 50 and 150 Canadian salmon trollers operating off the U.S. west coast.

Youth On The Move

At last, a travel column geared primarily to the needs of young people!

Lucy Izon is a 24-year-old Canadian writer who has travelled many parts of the world and has applied her training as a media researcher to dig up just about everything people want to know about how to go and what to do when they get there.

She has backpacked across Canada and done Japan on a shoestring among other things, so she knows what most young people want to see, recognizing that they usually don't have too much money to spend.

Lucy's column, Youth on the Move, appears in today's Times on page 33 and will be a regular Friday feature in the Times' Family section. (Today's column could be a lifesaver; it's about what to do in an emergency if you need money from home).

Incidentally, a lot of older readers will enjoy Youth on the Move. Particularly if they are young at heart and eager not to spend a lot of money on their travels.

Socreds Rake NDP On Report

The Social Credit government insisted Thursday the NDP has jeopardized a favorable fishing-boundary agreement despite the fact the "secret" paper it revealed was made public four months ago.

Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf — speaking for Premier Bill Bennett who refused to see reporters — said that when negotiations resume in a month or so, B.C. may not be invited back.

Negotiations were suspended in March with the U.S. and Canada at loggerheads in their attempt to hammer out new fishing boundaries now that both nations have declared 200-mile offshore limits.

Bawlf, the minister responsible for fisheries, said that when B.C. presented its position paper a year ago, it was warned by Ottawa to keep the contents secret or risk losing a place at the negotiating table.

But it was revealed Thursday the position paper was made public in late January at the annual convention of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union in Vancouver.

The entire content of the paper was reported in Vancouver newspapers at the time of the UFAWU convention.

When asked if it wasn't really the UFAWU that should bear the brunt of the government's anger, not the NDP, Bawlf said the situation was different.

The UFAWU was "told the error of their ways," but the government didn't make a big fuss of it because it didn't

Police Board Views Strike Threat

The Saanich police board called a special meeting today in the wake of an announcement that members of the policemen's union will hold a strike vote Monday night.

The board is expected to reply to a proposal the union made Thursday in which members offered to take a decrease in pay if the cost-of-living drops during the two-year term of a new contract.

Union president Phil Jamieson said today the proposal was made to show members aren't trying to gouge anyone in their insistence that cost-of-living allowances be applied to salary levels at the conclusion of the contract.

Mayor Mel Couvelier, however, has said any job action would be illegal until mediator Clark Gilmore has filed his report.

Problems over the new contract arose on May 24 with the union charged the board was reneging on a promise to tack COLA adjustments on to salary rates. The two sides had already reached agreement on a new contract May 12.

But board chairman Mayor Mel Couvelier maintains no such promise was ever made in the negotiations.

Couvelier suggested Jamieson misinterpreted the agreement to union members and is now embarrassed as a result.

"That's complete hogwash," Jamieson replied.

"It wasn't me the union members took a 100 per cent vote of non-confidence in," he said referring to a membership vote taken last week censuring Couvelier's handling of the negotiations.

Jamieson said he doesn't know what needs to be done to resolve the complex issue. One option, he said, would be to renegotiate the entire contract. Another would be to go on strike. He added he hopes neither will be necessary.

VETERANS' HIKE PASSES IN LESS THAN ONE HOUR

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons spent less than an hour Thurday approving legislation to increase disabled veteran pensions by up to $310 a year effective July 1.

The speedy passage followed all-party agreement to proceed with the bill which was introduced last week by Veterans Affairs Minister Dan MacDonald.

The bill increases pensions for totally disabled veterans to $7,471 a year from $7,160. This increase is in addition to automatic raises tied to consumer price increases.

The government last week refused opposition offers to pass the bill immediately, saying it did not want to interrupt second-reading debate of its controversial sales tax measures.

Alaster Baker, Progressive Conservative House leader, offered Thursday to pass the bill in one hour next week during a day set aside for debate on subjects chosen by the opposition.

Baker and Stanley Knowles, New Democratic House leader, accused the government of holding veterans up for ransom in order to push through other bills.

Yvon Pinard, deputy government House leader, then announced the bill would be proceeded with immediately if there was all-party agreement to pass it in one hour.

The bill will also raise pensions of former prisoners of war to $7,471 a year from $7,160. Widows pensions will be raised to $5,603 annually from $5,370.

Island for the first time since 1962.

In 1971 CIL sold James Island to a subsidiary, Canadian Freehold Properties Ltd., which made a study of the residential potential there.

But in 1976 CIL bought the island back, saying it would be retained for a long time for industrial purposes. It appears its industrial purpose will be mainly as a distribution centre.

John D'Eath of Canadian Freehold said the island is mainly sand and no residential development could take place until water supplies are available by pipes. The wells on the island produce little water and it is of poor quality.

Meanwhile, Macpherson said the company hopes to be able to provide work for some of the employees in other CIL plants but this study is just beginning and the total number might be small.

He said six of the 96 have the necessary qualifications for pension (at least 55 years old and 26 years of service). The rest will be looking for work.

James Island is an unorganized territory but many of the employees live in Central Saanich. Mayor Jean Butler said the closure was a serious economic blow but was not totally unexpected.

City to Be Forced To Pay Bus Costs

The new legislation will set up an eight-member Urban Transit Authority which in turn will establish at least three regional commissions — the Capital Region Transit Commission, the Lower Mainland Transit Commission, and The Small Community Transit Commission.

Members on the main board will be appointed by cabinet, but to qualify they must be elected municipal or regional representatives.

The authority will report to government through a committee of cabinet ministers which will approve budget and policy.

The transit commissions, also composed of elected officials, will negotiate transit agreements with local governments of at least five years' duration.

The commissions will work out operating agreements and participate in setting up routes, fares and costs.

Curtis told a press conference Bill 19 removes a double taxation that exists in communities which not only support a local transit system, but also subsidize Victoria and Vancouver's transit losses through their electricity bills.

B.C. Hydro will continue to operate the bus systems until a new bus company is established under the jurisdiction of the transit authority.

That won't happen until at least into the next fiscal year — after April 1, 1979, Curtis said.

When asked how much it would cost to purchase the buses from B.C. Hydro and who would pay for it, Curtis said those are details that will have to be worked out in the coming year. But he said he didn't think it would be an area to cause much concern, that he expects to work out a good deal with Hydro.

"In times of concern over diminishing energy supplies particularly relative to fossil fuel, this legislation confirms B.C.'s commitment to public passenger transport, and establishes a mechanism to ensure its efficient growth and effective management in response to locally determined needs," Curtis said.

The minister added that it's always a difficult problem but there has to be a balance struck between building more freeways and operating more public transit.

Terrorists Kill Wife, Miss Envoy

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Three terrorists believed to be Armenian vengeance-seekers pumped bullets into the windshield of the Turkish ambassador's limousine at a stoplight in downtown Madrid today, killing his wife, brother-in-law and a chauffeur, police said.

The ambassador, Zeki Kuneralp, was in the nearby embassy when three young men, all dressed in jeans, opened up with pistols on his beige Mercedes, which was bound for the Prado museum.

The terrorists fired from a car, believed to be a red Ford Fiesta, and sped from the scene on foot, witnesses said. Eight empty shells were found nearby, they said.

The envoy's wife, Nekla, was dead on arrival at a Madrid hospital and the body of his brother-in-law was not removed from the bullet-riddled limousine for more than an hour. Police did not say why.

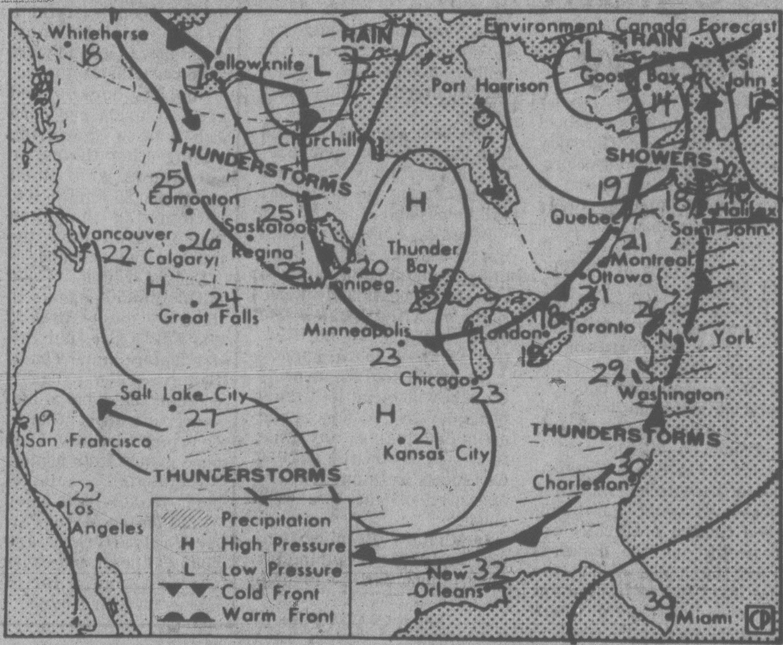

Map valid until noon Saturday

Another sunny and warm day is in the offing as a massive ridge of high pressure continues to hold firm over the province. Temperatures will once again climb into the 20s at most stations and a few Interior stations will likely see the mercury soar into the low 30s. Fine weather is anticipated for B.C. throughout the weekend with the ridge holding Pacific weather disturbances well off the coast.

S.A. GOV'T SAVES SEALS

CAPE TOWN (AP) — The South African government has reprieved about 27,500 seals scheduled to be killed in the next five years on Seal Island, in False Bay near Cape Town.

The seals are thinned out to keep them from depleting the fish supply. The government cancelled a four-year grant of the killing rights after claims by opponents of the killing that there was no proof Seal Island is overpopulated.

Measuring the rigging.

The world's best boat designers have spent the last year at their drawing boards trying for a winner. Saturday, their skills are put to the test, and the inovations which work will appear in next year's production sailers.

Times Staff

Just as the Indianapolis 500 is a testing ground for manufacturers of racing cars, this year's three-quarter ton world sailboat championships starting here Saturday will be a battleground for the world's top designers.

Although the skippers and crews of the 18 racing machines are all from the United States and Canada, the impact of the radical changes in design will be world-wide.

One of the boats to watch will be Hagar, belonging to Gerald Duncan and Joe Goldberg of the Seattle Yacht Club. Hagar is off the drawing board of Ron Holland, who at 30 ranks as one of the first four designers in his field.

The former New Zealander now works out of a converted stone piggery and lean-to barn in the Irish county of Cork. So much in demand, the time he can spend in the converted stone farmhouse where the Hollands and their two daughters live is minimal.

He was the designer of former British prime minister Ted Heath's newest boat and of several high-ranking entries in the prestigous Admiral's Cup series.

He designed Imp, who with Scaramouche and Bay Bea, formed the American team that placed second. Imp won two races, including the coveted Fastnet, and scored the highest points of all boats.

Another of his boats was Marionette, which with Moonshine and Yeoman XX won first spot for the British. He also designed Iorana III, skippered by W.W. Denzel of the Austrian team, which earned the third highest number of points.

Britton Chance, the naval architect who operates out of Newport, Rhode Island, who has designed 12-metres for America's Cup competition and the designer of Bay Bea, will also be watching the Victoria championships. He designed Sachem for Bill Buchan of Seattle, winner of this year's Swiftsure.

Winner of last year's Swiftsure in Kanata, which he designed himself, architect Vladimir Plavsik will race in his self-designed Spearhead.

The world-renown designers Cuthbertson and Cassion of Oakville, Ont., designed Jo, to be sailed by Jan Huibers of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club.

Graham and Schlageter of Chicago designed Chocolate Chips, which has been trucked up from Indiana, to be raced by Ronald Lester and Ronald Porter of the Michigan City Yacht Club.

Launched March 8, her first competition was in the North American championships in late April when she placed second in her first race, won the next three and finished ninth in the last one, which gave her second spot over-all.

Ton-class racing is a name for six levels of International Offshore Rule ratings which, unlike Swiftsure, allow boats to race as equally as possible, the first boat home being the winner. Three-quarter ton is close to the IOR rating limit of 24.5, boats measuring about 30 to 35 feet in length.

This week, measurers headed by B.C.'s chief measurer John Evetts of Vancouver were kept busy measuring sails, rudders and other boat equipment.

Because of design innovations, world championship boats are often raced for only one season, being replaced by even more radical designs the following year. Many of the innovations introduced in world championships gradually are implemented by designers of more conventional craft.

Each boat will have a crew of six.

A 25-mile Olympic course will be raced Saturday, starting about two miles south of Clover Point. Similar races are scheduled for Sunday and next Thursday.

On Monday there will be the short offshore race of 130 miles which will follow most of the Swiftsure course.

The final race will be sailed next Friday. It will be a long 249½-mile race with a time limit of 54 hours, again arranged on the Swiftsure course.

Forests Closing Early As Fire Hazard Climbs

A long-range forecast for continued warm, sunny weather may be a blessing for those planning an outdoors weekend but it spells trouble for those responsible for protecting the forests.

Temperatures in the mid-20s have raised the forest fire hazard on southern Vancouver Island into the "high" range and some other areas in B.C. have a similar or "moderate" reading.

This has already led to one logging company closing its road to the public.

Pacific Logging says the Bear Creek-Diversion Reservoir area near Jordan River will be closed to recreational access this weekend.

Weekes Lake gate will remain open.

Barry Mountain, ranger for the Langford district, said today people should be careful with fire in the woods.

He had to contend with two fires Thursday. The first broke out on new B.C. Hydro right-of-way being cleared near Mount Finlayson. It took about two hours before air tankers, brought in from Kamloops, had the blaze under control about 2 p.m.

The second fire broke out closer to Shawnigan Lake on the right-of-way later in the evening. It took about two hours for ground crews to bring that one under control.

Mountain said a relatively new infra-red scanner, which every ranger station has been equipped with this year, was used on the right-of-way early this morning and there were no hot spots.

There have been 232 forest fires in B.C. so far this year compared to 318 for the same period in 1977.

Hank Doerksen of the forest protection division said today the increasingly hot days will likely put most areas into the "high" fire hazard reading by the end of the weekend.

Camosun Principal: 36 Apply

Camosun College has received 36 applications from across Canada for the job of principal, chairman Janet Baird said Thursday.

Councillors and committee members will start sorting through the applications and hope to select a new principal by mid-July, she said.

Present principal, Dr. Grant Fisher, decided to step down after seven years to make room for someone with a new approach, Baird said.

Dr. Fisher will stay at Camosun to teach administration.

PO SHUTTING 'PARTY AREA'

Customers who rent post boxes at the main Victoria Post Office have been told that the lock box lobby will be closed at night effective June 12 because the Post Office cannot guarantee proper security of the mails.

"The lobby is being used as a lavatory, a sleeping area or a place to hold a party during the night hours," explains Al Bennett, assistant manager of the retail and delivery department, in a letter to box users.

"Complaints have been received regularly about the filth of this area and the fact that some people are afraid to enter."

In the past, the lobby containing 1,100 boxes has been open on a 24-hour basis. Starting June 12 it will be open from 6:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Friday, 7 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday but closed all day Sunday and on holidays.

The letter says although city police have been keeping a close watch on the lobby, with their other commitments they cannot provide full protection.

Bennett said today the problem has been getting steadily worse, to the point where night and Sunday closure was the only practical solution.

In a recent early morning incident, police evicted 10 people who had spent the night in sleeping bags on the floor.

"We have had a number of customer complaints about the behavior, males and females together," he added.

Bennett said there have been parties and fights in the lobby and mail boxes have been knocked back about one foot, making it possible to enter the main Post Office area or for someone to reach in and take mail from the back of the boxes.

"It's primarily our concern for mail security that has forced us to take this action," he said.

Boom Predicted Despite Closures

Victoria MLA Sam Bawlf and Mayor Mike Young said Thursday the region is on the verge of major economic expansion, despite closure of several manufacturing plants.

In separate interviews, they said the layoff of 96 James Island employees is a serious economic and psychological blow — especially after the loss of 62 jobs at McDonald's bakery and the announcement that almost 200 forest ministry jobs will be transferred out of the city.

But while manufacturing jobs are being lost, others are being created and the nature of Victoria is changing.

They both described Victoria as being at the crossroads and about to take a new economic direction.

Mayor Young said he had pushed for rapid development of the tourist industry "although it is not everyone's cup of tea" to cushion the economic blow during the expected closure of some manufacturing plants here.

"Tourism is something that can be developed almost overnight. You throw a party and invite everyone here. However, this is ancient history now. It is already under way. We have to move strongly in other areas."

These would include new major hotels and supporting services.

"Perhaps the time has come to take a trip east and steal a few pocket industries as well."

Closure of James Island explosive plant was no surprise to Young who worked there briefly 22 years ago and even then there were reports of an imminent closure.

"The plant has had several reprieves. This closure is not unexpected but it is a serious blow. I have counted 40 industries that have closed here in 20 years. The pattern is clear."

But the future could be bright in new directions, he said, especially if the region gets the type of co-operation from government agencies that it did on developing the tourist industry, which is booming.

Meanwhile, Bawlf said a wave of new jobs can be expected for Victoria both in the provincial civil service and in private enterprise.

The provincial government will be adding to the Victoria payroll despite the loss of almost 200 jobs in the ministry of forests.

"I can tell you there will be a net increase in provincial government jobs in Victoria in the current year," he said.

For example, he said, there are or will soon be an additional 49 jobs created for Victoria this year in areas under his jurisdiction, the ministry of recreation and conservation and B.C. Ferries Corporation.

Most other ministries will show a net increase in Victoria jobs this year as well.

Bawlf said he is gathering statistics to support this statement.

In addition, Bawlf said, there will be four task forces operating this summer to create additional jobs for the Victoria area.

The task forces will study:

— Opportunities to expand Victoria's fishing fleet;

— The potential for retail expansion in downtown Victoria;

— Logical sites for a convention-arts centre;

— Methods of expanding Victoria's growing scientific research industry.

Three of the task forces are already at work and the fourth, on research industries, will be formed within a month. Bawlf said that, except for universities, Victoria already has the largest collection of scientific research industries in Western Canada.

TOWN TALK

Yachtsmen competing in the three-quarter ton world championships, the first race of which will be on Saturday, will take time out to do a little socializing this evening.

Along with the five-man international jury for the championships, writers and photographers, the sailors will don more formal duds for a reception at Government House.

The reception has been arranged by Provincial Secretary and Travel Industry Minister Grace McCarthy's ministry.

Motorists wondering how to describe distance travelled when automobile odometers read in kilometres may try getting used to metrage in place of mileage.

The word means the same in French or English and according to a majority of letters appearing in the Metric Monitor, a publication of Metric Commission Canada, metrage is preferred.

It beats clickage, a word which topped a Toronto contest for a suitable replacement, but ran third in a cross-country CBC radio survey after kilomage and kilage.

Local architect Ben Levinson believes children between 3 and 10 years of age can be taught to make solar collectors and intends to prove it.

On Saturday, June 10, he will give a speech to children of this age group at two public libraries — 10:30 a.m. at the McClung branch library at 3950 Cedar Hill and 2:30 p.m. in the Oak Bay branch library at 1442 Monterey.

He will explain how solar collectors can be made and adapted to existing houses and has prepared a mock-up of a solar collector which will help the children understand the principle of a solar collector. He has also prepared a brochure, illustrated and written in simple language, to give to the children.

"Solar power is becoming more feasible each day because fuel costs are rising," Levinson said. "By the time today's child is grown and ready to build his house, solar heating will be just as popular as the electronic calculators of today."

Victoria libertarians no longer must go to Vancouver to attend civil liberties association meetings because a group is being formed here.

Spokesman Frank Preston says an organizing committee comprising 10 members, including three UVic professors, is in the process of getting an association incorporated and established in Victoria.

A membership drive likely will be launched later in the summer.

He says the group will tackle several issues, such as freedom of information from government and data banks, RCMP probes and illegal operations, Human Rights issues, prisoners' rights and local police board priorities.

Preston, a technician with the Victoria engineering department, is a volunteer worker with prisoners at William Head. His wife, Norrie, is active in the Status of Women League.

It took a lot of door-knocking and pavement-pounding but volunteers raised $14,000 in the Victoria area and $17,000 on the rest of Vancouver Island for the Multiple Sclerosis Society in this year's campaign.

The money will be used for multiple sclerosis research.

More about the mail delivered with insufficient postage and no penalty: post office spokesman Buz Sawyer says the item cited Tuesday with 12 cents instead of the new first-class rate of 14 cents might actually have been a third-class letter, proper postage for which is 12 cents. (It wasn't)

He adds: "Anyone can beat the system in this democratic society based on mutual trust. We trust people to put the right postage on. We might intercept it (with the wrong postage), but it might slip by.

"It's like your lock boxes — people can steal newspapers if they want to, and they do. But unless it was a mistake, it's outright theft. It's stealing revenue from the post office."

Deception Laid To Car Dealer

Speedway Motors Ltd. of Victoria and company sales manager Roy Passmore were charged in provincial court today with a violation of the Trade Practices Act.

Both were remanded to next Friday for plea.

Speedway is charged with deceptive practice in connection with the sale of a 1975 Volkswagen Rabbit to John Lawford, 306 Bessborough.

The company at 971 Yates is alleged to have been deceptive and misleading in describing the vehicle's usage.

The purchaser had allegedly been told that the car was a demonstrator. It was later found out that the vehicle had been involved in a serious accident.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — News of a drop in the money supply provided the impetus for a moderate advance in stock prices.

At the close on Thursday the Federal Reserve Board listed a $1 billion decline in the basic measure of the money supply.

The Board has been attempting to curb inflation by pushing up short-term interest rates in order to discourage rapid monetary growth.

Brokers said the latest figures heightened hopes that the effort was succeeding, and that the Board might not feel the need to push interest rates much higher.

Meanwhile, the U.S. government reported this morning that wholesale prices of finished goods rose 0.7 per cent in May, compared with a 1.3 per cent surge the month before. That also tended to reinforce hopes that recent inflationary pressures might soon subside.

Reliance Group led the active list, up 1½ to $33⅞. The company said 4.90 million of its warrants to buy the stock at $32.07 a share had been exercised by the close of business Thursday.

Any of the rest of the approximately 6.52 million warrants not exercised today are scheduled to expire this weekend.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices were broadly higher in moderate trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange. Royal Bank climbed ½ to $32¼, Brascan A ⅛ to $16¾, Moore Corp. ⅞ to $37½, Bell Canada ⅜ to $58⅝ and TransCanada PipeLines ⅛ to $15¼. Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce slipped ¼ to $28⅝. Among speculative issues, Stanford Mines rose two cents to 57 cents.

London

LONDON (CP) — The London stock market was moderately lower near the close of light trading. The Financial Times index was down 3.9 to 474.3 an hour before the close. Leading equities drifted after rising above early low levels, while gold issues erased opening declines following a recovery in the bullion price. Canadian stocks eased.

Channel 9 Launches New Poldark Series

By BILL KAUFMAN
Washington Post

Some critics have referred to it as a "Cornish soap opera," while others maintain it picks up where Errol Flynn and Douglas Fairbanks Jr. left off. In any case, Poldark has a lot of elements television viewers seem to appreciate, including a sexy leading man whose swashbuckling heroics have set untold female hearts aflutter.

The Public Broadcasting Service imported the BBC series last year, and for 16 episodes the series about the life and loves of Ross Poldark, an 18th-century cavalier, had many American viewers grafted to their TV sets.

Knowing a good thing when they see it, PBS this week begins a series of 13 new "Poldark" adventures that pick up th plot seven months after the final episode of the original run.

Poldark, played with brooding intensity by British actor Robin Ellis, will continue to do battle with those who oppose him, as well as continue his romancing of Demelza (Angharad Rees), whom he married last season.

The second series has Poldark returning to Cornwall from a battlefield. (The first time it was the American Revolution; this time it's the French one.) As Winston Graham's pot-boiler has it, once again Poldark finds his homecoming complicated by old enemies, new intrigues and — yes — more romantic problems.

By way of a teaser, here's some of what the months ahead will bring. Though Demelza has been transformed from a trollopy street urchin into Poldark's sensuous wife, their marriage is threatned by the shadow of Poldark's first love, Elizabeth (Jill Townsend), who is now married to George Warleggan (Ralph Bates), a major heel.

Forthcoming intrigues will involve tortuous births, unrequited (and sated) loves, murderous highwaymen and avaricious landlords — (The Cornish countryside also happens to be devastated by social unrest.)

Each week viewers will be left with cliff-hanger endings, which presumably will serve to bring them eagerly back.

Daytime Emmy Awards

Nominees for The Fifth Annual Emmy Awards for Daytime Television, airing live on the ABC Television Network on Wednesday, June 7 at 2 p.m., include several productions from ABC's acclaimed children's programming schedule.

Among the nominees are (clockwise from upper left) two highly-rated ABC Afterschool Specials, Hewett's Just Different and The Pinballs, and two entries from the Schoolhouse Rock children's informational series, Grammar Rock, and American History Rock.

The Tony Awards will be broadcast Sunday, at 9:30 p.m. on Channel 7.

Two-Bedroom Charmer

The sunken living room features a soaring beamed ceiling, large stone fireplace and full-height windows to create an effect of bringing the outdoors indoors.

The well-planned galley-style kitchen has liberal storage facilities and is open to the separate dining room for maximum convenience and minimum legwork.

Both bedrooms have ample closet storage and front expo-

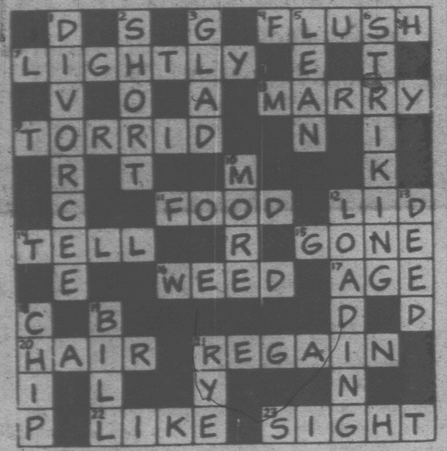
PAYOFF PUZZLE

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle



CLUES ACROSS

4. FLUSH not blush. "Strong feelings" (anger, etc.) link up with FLUSH better than with blush (associated rather with embarrassment, etc.).

7. LIGHTLY not rightly. Inserting "rightly" tends to make the clue unsuitably contentious — as if there were some question of rectitude. "LIGHTLY" carries a more apt sort of emphasis.

9. TORRID not horrid. "TORRID" is more in tone with the clue's word "tedious." "Horrid" is very emphatic an suggests positive discomfort of difficulty (e.g, in blizzards) rather than mere tediousness.

11. FOOD not good or mood. Why should "the children" have one collective mood? Their FOOD would be a matter of "some" importance, whereas their good would be all important.

14. TELL not sell. The mere fact that you have useful (i.e., valuable) information doesn't necessarily mean that anybody is prepared to pay money for it — that you may, or may not, be anxious to sell it.

15. GONE not done. "Done" means finished cooking, or simply finished (i.e., concluded) without particular reference to consumable things. It is "GONE," rather, that means finished in the sense of having been consumed "like food, etc."

20. HAIR not heir. HAIR links up more specifically with the idea of "coloration"; a son can show many inherited tendencies. ("Heir" — not even necessarily a blood relation — is a word of unsuitable class anyway.)

21. REGAIN not retain. There can be no question of retaining what one no longer has — i.e., that which one "possessed before."

22. LIKE not live. "LIKE" is a realistic answer. "Live" is pitching it too strongly.

23. SIGHT not might. SIGHT is more directly apt. It would be a question of the events of the night, rather than of that night, purely as time. Fight not favored.

CLUES DOWN

1. DIVORCEE not divorced. The clue's concern with a "person" matches up better with the DIVORCEE viewed as a representative individual. The divorced, in general, should not bore people, rather.

2. SHORT not shorn. As a "style," it is a question of SHORT hair. If the hair is shorn as the means to that end, it is less directly to the point.

5. LEAN not leap. In order to be able to risk losing one's balance, one needs to be in a state of poise (which a person leaping forward can hardly be).

10. MORE not sore. They're always ready for MORE, whether the topics are especially sore ones or not.

13. DEED not deer. The gracefulness, etc., of a deer is an accident of nature; it doesn't reflect worthiness in the positive sense that a fine DEED does.

18. CHIP not chop. The word "CHIP" has a suitably fragmentary quality. One may well chop off a substantial piece.

19. BILL not hill. A BILL or beak definitely juts out, but a hill may be little more than a gentle undulation of the landscape. Mill not favored.

SOAP OPERA SCENE

New Blood for Series

By STEVEN H. SCHEUER

NEW YORK — Talk about blood transfusions — has anyone noticed the massive changes occurring on General Hospital?

Just when last rites were imminent this winter for ABC's tottering daytime moneymaker, the old warhorse decided not to give up the ghost. From near extinction, "General Hospital" is making a gallant comeback this spring because of a network decision not to junk a rickety would-be has-been.

Last January, ABC got smart and induced Gloria Monty to take over the floundering show. A legend in the world of soap, Gloria Monty, among other things, directed "Secret Storm" for 15 years, competing in a man's world without any help from the women's rights movement because there wasn't any.

Appalled at what she saw on the show, Gloria went to work overnight after the network dropped four episodes because they were so dull. It is now four months later, and Dr. Monty has not only saved the patient, but best of all, ratings are up.

Viewers who gave up on the old "General" will hardly recognize the Monty renovation job, although a few faces are familiar. First of all, the lady spent a few bucks for a fancy modern set so she could show life in hospital corridors. Actors were ordered to dress differently and a fashion coordinator was brought in. More attention was paid to lighting. All window dressing, of course, but it sparked the actors and brightened the show.

In charge of every move, producer Monty is also the soap's real director, giving orders to stage directors, emphasizing pace, taking more cuts, a major change from those long, dull, talk sequences.

Now renovation has its place, but boss Monty maintains "character is all." She keeps a close eye on the script basics, and is employing a mix of new faces with the old-timers.

Emily McLaughlin's battle-scarred nurse Jessie Brewer remains, instead of being tossed aside. Monty wants to go into Jessie's home life, and intends to see that Jessie will take in one of the show's young people. Veteran John Beradino's Steve Hardy, chief of staff, isn't being ignored either; and after all these years, Hardy was given a home.

Ambitious Chris Robinson is Gloria's ace, recruited to play Rick Webber, a key part. Other newcomers include H. M. Wynant, young Jeanne Ann Francis, and Leslie Charleson's (Dr. Monica Webber) sister Kate, in the role of Gloria Roberts.

Even the locale has been changed for luck. What used to be Ohio is now upstate New York, if that matters to fans. It does, however, to boss Monty, and to the cast. The producer's next move is to take the show outside, do remotes around Los Angeles.

All this upheaval means more work for everyone connected with the show. Grumblings were heard at first, but that was to be expected. After watching the new woman in charge, no one could beef because the boss worked harder than anyone else . . . and still does.

PLOT PORTENTS. With the new salon a washout because of location, Derek may be forced to capitulate to Kay Chancellor on "The Young and the Restless." So Jill loses another round to determined Kay. Although author Lorie has her sensational book, pregnant sister Leslie gets revenge without naming the true father.

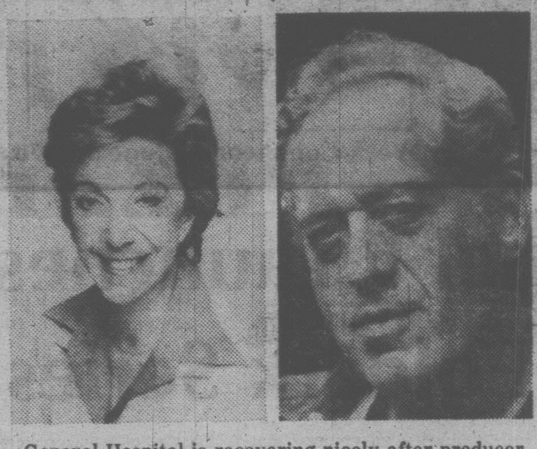
The hunt for Trish has taken a back seat during Julie's murder trial on "Days of Our Lives," but action is due over the new lead provided by David's private investigator. Now that the honeymoon's over, Linda plans using her authority at her husband's plant — and quirky Donna continues to be a thorn in the relationship between Marlena and Don, although Marlena is actually making headway with the mixed-up youngster.

Things on "Ryan's Hope" seem to be at a standstill, except for the relationship between Delia and Roger, which is getting more intense. Evidence that Roger is smitten comes when he gives Delia a bracelet that once belonged to his mother. Oh yes, Maeve and Johnny are on a cruise and the rest of the cast coasts along.

Surgeon Jim Craig goes under the knife himself in "One Life to Live," for a heart operation performed by super-surgeon Jack Scott. Also, the terrorists set up a second execution attempt on Paul Kendall's life, who agrees to go along with his own assassination.

CHANNEL CHATTER: Henderson Forsythe plays the sheriff in the Off-Broadway smash musical, "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas," and men and women in the audience take a while before they begin to recognize him from his role as Dr. David Stewart in "As the World Turns."

COMINGS and goings on Ryan's Hope. Malcolm Groome will give up his role of Pat Ryan on the popular soap soon and a new actor, as yet unselected, will take ver the leading part.



General Hospital is recovering nicely after producer Gloria Monty was brought in to ward off disaster. Henderson Forsyths of As the World Turns plays a sheriff in an Off-Broadway show.

John Hearn's Collectibles

Two recent letters, one from F. Kohler of Woodstock, Ont., and the other from Mrs. C. Whittall of Lethbridge, both enquiring about the possible value of fine old stoneware jugs which once contained Scotch whisky.

Not promising, I'm afraid. Canadian collectors definitely prefer Canadian jugs. These, if they are authentic would command a far better price over there where, I am sure, they are very collectible indeed.

I question the authenticity. They are usually very handsome pieces and highly decorative in their own right. They may well have been made purely as show pieces. This could be true even if you were sure that they were quite old. Collectors in the days of the Roman Empire used to complain bitterly about reproduction Greek antiques. Fakery has a long history.

The neat thing about old fakes is that they would not have been made at all except to duplicate something of great value; the workmanship therefore was exquisite. Today, when the word 'collectible' usually refers to a manufactured article, an item becomes reproductible only when the possible quantity and an inflated price make a production run economically feasible. The cost of making a couple of dozen Carnival compotes, for instance, would be prohibitive. To sell them at chain store prices you would have to turn them out in hundreds of thousands but if you can slip them surreptitiously into the antique market then relatively small runs become attractive.

Cigarette cards keep turning up — along with rumours to the effect that English collectors are paying thousands of pounds for single sets — and very large sums for single cards.

I have no reason to doubt this but again, these are English collectors and you may assume that the high prices are paid only for very rare cards. The little pictures issued in millions by John Player and W. D. & H. O. Wills are collectible but not particularly valuable. Less brands means smaller quantities and up goes the price. The tobacco companies knew exactly what they were doing when they issued those cards. Once you started collecting them you were hooked into the brand until your set was complete.

Let me hasten to say that I have no idea what cards are commanding high prices in England, the important thing is that there is no great interest in them here. Let me offer my usual advice. Save them — and all those old bubble gum cards — for your great grandchildren; by that time they are bound to be worth something.

If the cigarette card market in Canada is sluggish, the same cannot be said for old postcards. Pretty well everything printed before World War Two is now collectible if it features street scenes of Canadian towns. Fortunately I have no evidence of ridiculous prices being paid and mostly they are trading in the 50¢ to $2.00 bracket. They are bound to be popular — compact, easily displayed in albums and a treasure chest of history. Today's cards will be equally curious — and collectible in another 50 years.

Hollywood Stars Hit the road

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Like runners at the starting line, Hollywood stars are lined up awaiting the gun for the summer stock season when they will fan out across the country stomping the boards in all 50 states.

Movie production slackens during the summer months and television shows are on hiatus, leaving performers free to seek out live audiences and big bucks in the hustings.

Virtually scores of well-known names and faces hit the road in a variety of musicals, dramas and comedies, not counting such concert stars as Bob Hope, Helen Reddy, Cher Bono Allman and the rest.

The in-person celebrity appearances provide an opportunity for millions of Americans who live outside of New York and Hollywood to see their favorites in the flesh. They fill theater coffers and enrich the stars in the process.

Superstars, the likes of Jane Fonda, Robert Redford, Paul Newman and Barbra Streisand eschew stock theater. They don't need the additional revenue for one thing and they're too busy for another.

Only Burt Reynolds, among the biggies, hits the road, most recently starring in "The Rainmaker," doubtless to play roles he doesn't get in movies.

The "road" was once called summer stock and the straw hat circuit. The players were mostly Broadway actors who found themselves unemployed in the days before air-conditioning when legitimate theaters in New York were closed because of the oppressive heat.

In the old days summer stock was pretty much limited to the outback towns of New England during July and August with many of the theaters, little more than converted barns. Now magnificent theaters abound in almost all the major cities of the United States.

The theaters are air conditioned, modern in every way and they pay top names as much as $4,500 a week, which definitely ain't hay and better by far than most Broadway production salaries.

Among the stars who do well in stock are Ginger Rogers, Dana Andrews, Zsa Zsa and Eva Gabor, Broderick Crawford, Van Johnson, Donald O'Connor, Hugh O'Brian, Gloria Swanson, Karen Valentine, Phyllis Diller, Don Knotts, Ann Sothern, Cloris Leachman and June Allyson.

The genial Irishman (is there any other kind?) brought his wife Eloise (Taylor) out of retirement 22 years ago to costar with him on the road.

They have a wide-ranging repertoire which includes

New Poldark Series Begin

It's amusing to note that even the publicity material for the series to be presented on "Masterpiece Theater," has the glowing and flowery prose of a romantic novel. A sample: "Lacking the obnoxous arrogance of Rhett Butler, the chasteness of Tarzan and the moodiness of Heathcliff, Ross Poldark continues to be a very human hero, easily identifiable to contemporary men and women who believe in the rational and intelligent exercise of romance."

The first series reportedly drew an unprecedented amount of mail from American viewers. Alistair Cooke, who hosted the show last year, and who is back again for the new episodes, said that the second series was not anticipated when the original went on the air but was added in response to popular demand.

"Winston Graham, the author, is a modest man," Cooke said, "and he was as amazed by this success as anybody. His Poldark novels always had a loyal following of aficionados, but their exposure on television made millions of people see them as a kind of romantic classic along the lines of 'Ivanhoe' and 'The Prisoner of Zenda.'"

Graham himself sees Poldark as a kind of historical and sociological mirror, as reflected through the eyes of his flamboyant characters.

"I don't have to invent anybody," Graham explained. "I have always been interested in other people more than myself — though there has to be something of myself in every character created, or he or she will not come to life. I have always been more interested in people than in events, but it is only through events that I have ever been able to illuminate the period covered by Poldark as being one of sweeping social change. Most important was the Industrial Revolution, which began to blur class distinctions.

"One had these tremendous riots, and they were not against the lords, they were riots against the middlemen, the corn factors who kept the corn in their warehouses and put the prices up," Graham said. "Very often the rebellion was not to seize the corn for nothing, but to seize it and pay for it at a price that they could afford."

The author added, "There's a lot to be said for the stability of the English society, but there's also a lot to be said about the terrible class structures that existed."

Graham said that the squire played by Ellis was not patterned after any particular person. "I did meet an airman who had recently crashed and who had something of the same high-strung quality of Ross," Graham recalled. "He may have contributed something to the character."

As for Demelza, Graham said, "I got the name from the Goss Moors in Cornwall. I was driving along, and I saw this signpost with 'Demelza' on it. Since then hundreds of people have named their daughters after it."

Hollywood Stars Hit the Road

Last season the O'Briens doubled up with another acting couple, Bill Bixby and his wife, in "Comd, joined us in three plays over the years, making it an O'Brien family package. But Brigid is getting independent. She's just finished a movie, 'Born Again,' and would like to do things on her own.

"I love playing the road as much as I ever did the movies or TV. And I've played every state in the Union except the Dakotas, I guess.

"It takes me back to the days when I was in my 20s and toured the country in one-night stands. So I've completed the cycle with the knowledge that I've never lost my love for the theater.

"Some theaters hold 5,000 people, so the pay is great. I understand one circuit paid Burt Reynolds $30,000 a week for 'The Rainmaker.'

"They give you a guarantee. I get $4,000 a week, plus $500 if we go over a certain point. And I always get the $500. Where are you going to get that kind of money? Not in TV or pictures.

"We discovered that audiences in other parts of the country prefer light comedy to drama. The plays we do are not too sophisticated and the plots aren't too complicated.

"Most of the people want family entertainment, clean, wholesome plays. The plays that bomb on Broadway are a smash on the circuit. Don't ask me why.

"I run into all kinds of people from Hollywood and Broadway out there on the road: Don Ameche, Eve Arden, Cesar Romero, Dorothy Lamour, Maureen O'Sullivan and Bob Crane.

TV MAILBAG

By THOM MEAD

HOLLYWOOD — The TV Mailbag:

Q. I'm a great fan of Farrah Fawcett-Majors and really miss her on "Charlie's Angels." But I think she made a big mistake leaving the popular weekly series. How is she doing on her own and will she ever return as an "Angel?" — M.N., San Francisco, Calif.

A. Farrah Fawcett-Majors, who has not been doing many movies since leaving "Charlie's Angels," decided recently to settle her legal differences with Angel producer Spelling-Goldberg out of court. Farrah, who burst into superstardom largely as a result of her Angel role, quit the series last season.

According to the settlement, Farrah wil again become one of "Charlie's Angels" but only as a guest star. She will appear in three episodes during the 1978-79 season and three more in the 1979-80 season. The settlement did not state how much she will be paid per show. The fact that Farrah was not receiving many movie bids apparently prompted her to settle the dispute over the television series. Her agent said Farrah had been able to get only a few acting assignments since the filing of the lawsuit in March, 1977.

Q. You recently disclosed the possibility that Leonard Nimoy would be back for the new "Star Trek" movie. I haven't heard a thing on this. What gives? — K.E., Victoria, British Columbia.

A. Well, it's official. Nimoy will be in the new "Star Trek" movie doing his famous role of Spock.

Q. Please settle an argument. Did Dandy Don Meridith, the Monday night football announcer, ever ride a bronco horse on television advertisements for Snuff? And who is the cowboy riding the horse now? — L.G., Camano Island, Wis.

A. Don Meredith doesn't appear in commercials for Snuff. You must be thinking of football star Walt Garrison, who in the off-season travels the rodeo circuit.

Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies. Inquiries should be sent to Thom Mead, TV Mailbag, c/o Revue, Box 300, Victoria, B.C., V8W 2N4.

BOOKS

Pat Barclay

They said it couldn't be done. "They" included W. O. Mitchell himself, who should know.

Mitchell was referring to the impossibility of transferring Who Has Seen the Wind, his classic story of a boy's growing up, to the silver screen, but he might just as well have been talking about the making of any all-Canadian movie.

To get his picture to the screen, director Allan King went through enough diplomatic and financial manoeuvres to provide the plot for another, very all-Canadian, movie. First he planned to serialize Who Has Seen the Wind in five one-hour episodes for CBC-TV, and Patricia Watson, King's wife, went ahead and prepared the scripts. The idea was to edit the series into a feature film later, a clever ploy which would have enabled King to finance his project with both CBC and CFDC funds. The clever ploy collapsed when the CBC backed out, but not before King and Watson had spent three years (three years!) on the project.

Next someone got the bright idea that maybe the Saskatchewan government would agree to invest in the project; after all, Mitchell is a native son who grew up in Weyburn, about 75 miles southeast of Regina, and his novel catches the awesome beauty of the prairie landscape as no other Canadian work has done, before or since.

The government eventually did agree, putting up $300,000 on condition that director King use local film people as trainees. Thirty-five new bodies were added to the film crew as a result of this arrangement.

But Murphy's Law had not finished with Alan King yet. His executive producer — the man who pays the bills if a film exceeds its budget — had to be replaced. And oh yes, King needed a "star" name to attract his backers — if not his audiences — and the choice fell on Jose Ferrer, who plays The Ben. Consequently, both Bens — father and son — are on screen a disproportionate amount of time and the character of Bent Candy (look him up if you've forgotten him, he's worth it) was dumped altogether. Finally, there was King's disagreement with W. O. Mitchell.

MITCHELL . . . his script rejected

Mitchell, it seems, was less than enamoured with King's wife's script, and wanted to write his own. King consented, but only verbally. So Mitchell spent six months on a script that was never used and ended up washing his hands of the whole production: "Never again. From now on I won't even go to the can without calling my lawyer and getting it in writing."

His absence is our loss. Because the screen version of Who Has Seen the Wind, though it remains faithful to the details of the book in all but a few instances and achieves moments of breathtaking beauty and intense poignancy, is missing something; something which perhaps only W. O. himself could have supplied.

For openers, everybody in it is so darned nice. Miss MacDonald, the school dragon, is only a disappointed spinster. Tang and Vooie, "The China Kids" whom Miss Thompson saves from a lingering death by malnutrition, are only the objects of petty bigotry. And Mrs. Abercrombie, who epitomizes what Mitchell (after Conrad) calls the "heart of darkness," is only a self-righteous, domineering snob. Between them, King and Watson even pass over the evils which the "dirty thirties" visited on the prairies, and Brian's ambition to become a "dirt doctor" — which Mitchell used to help symbolize the balance between good and evil in human affairs — is never mentioned.

Further, the central theme of the book, Brian's search for the meaning of life, is barely touched on. As the film opens, Brian saunters down a country road holding the hem of his jacket like a sail before the wind. So the Wind, which in the book is constant and living proof of God's presence, is reduced to a plaything!

This man-centred view of things prevails throughout. Nowhere does King even give us a God's-eye view of the town. (The book does, often.) Not surprisingly, considering King's earlier work, his Who Has Seen the Wind is really only a documentary drama about life in a small prairie town.

On this level it is delightfully successful, and I'd be more than happy to see it again. There's something about recognizing your own people and place on stage and film that's of enormous psychological value, and Canadians have been starved of the experience for long enough.

But the real movie of Who Has Seen the Wind has yet to be made — if indeed it can be made at all. I hope W. O. Mitchell decides to hang on to that script.

The Irrational Country that is Cuba

By JACK SCOTT

With two notable exceptions, Cuba remains pretty much the same perplexing, depressing and exhilarating experience it was in the early- and mid-sixties when this reviewer made four visits — none of them, it must be added, with any firm conclusions.

The exceptions, both inevitable, were, first, that Fidel Castro has become internationally-minded, hopeful of exporting Communism to other parts of the world, and, second, that some tentative form of rapprochement with the United States, though on-again and off-again, seems in the works.

For the average Cuban life clearly remains a question of irritating consumer-product shortages and queues for rationed goods, abject failures and morale-building triumphs in Castro's dream of the new order, and perhaps more faith in the charismatic Maximum Leader than a do-it-yourself ideology that causes a loss of individual freedom for the good, for better or worse, of a transitional state. These things may have become intensified in the last decade. They remain substantially the same and with little prospect of immediate change.

What has changed is the Cuban adventure in Angola and Castro's influence in black Africa ("the heady aura of that victory still surrounds the Cubans") and the possibility, dim though it may appear at the moment, that the United States will accord at least guarded recognition to the only self-styled communist system in the western hemisphere. The latter will, of course, go a long way to solving Cuba's persistent economic problems, yet clearly have imponderable ramifications for the future.

RAMON CASTRO

These, at any rate, are the conclusions of Fred Ward, a National Geographic writer who made repeated visits to Cuba to prepare his excellent, Inside Cuba Today, probably the best assessment by an American correspondent of that enigmatic country just 90 miles off the Florida coast. Ward is understanding, though critical, of the Cuban brand of socialism, a supporter back home of the Democratic Party and thus an advocate of the so-called "free enterprise" system. Yet this is essentially the fairest of all judgments of Castro's years of power by a "neutral" observer.

It's a judgment that's been a long time coming, but it had to happen. Ward, himself, notes that his book "offers the kind of view that will be increasingly important if rational decisions are to be made about its future in relation to ours." That Cuba is totally irrational is no fault of his.

Nowadays, with more than half the 9½ million population born since Castro and his supporters marched into Havana in 1959, Cuba clearly overwhelmingly supports its cigar-smoking leader ("they would follow Fidel aywhere," Ward found), yet the country is still in a perilous state. Soviet aid, which Ward believes may be up to $2 million a day, plus the USSR support of the sugar exports at well over the world market price, and the Soviet-supplied military hardware, are there, but Cuba remains in economic disorder, living well beyond its means.

The fact that it maintains probably the most powerful military in all of LatinAmerica (estimates are that 200,000 Cubans are in the permanent armed forces) puts an incredible strain on the peso, (unrealistically valued at $1.25 American) that no amount of Soviet aid can over-come.

Now, as then, there are enormous stresses on food supplies, housing and consumer goods that cause a strict rationing system and, at least, a clandestine public grumbling. Though it is the only Latin American nation freed of begging, pimping, prostitution and gambling, those well-known tourist attractions of pre-revolutionary Havana, it has become a spartan society that still has a long, long way to go to realize Castro's promises.

An older brother of Fidel, Ramon, in an interview with Ward, probably best summarized everyday life. Said he: "We are not living for a sweet life — living to be drunk, to use marijuana, to use cocaine — we live for work." So far, he might have added, there's been no alternative.

Some things are spectacularly good. Schools continue to be built, in Ward's words, "at a fantastic pace" and illiteracy has all but been eliminated. Cuban restaurants are uniformly excellent because of a need to siphon off excess pesos that buy little else. Housing is put up everywhere, often with volunteer labor, replacing the primitive "bohios", though shortages persist. Day-care centres look after some 80,000 children as women join the labor force, often in important positions (more than 25 per cent of all Cuban women are working). Medical care is free and generally good despite the defection of more than half of Cuban doctors to the U.S. The care of mental patients is first rate, and, says Ward, "an example of the Revolution's care for people."

Sports, the ballet schools and company organized by Alicia Alonso, and even tourism, are ornaments in the Cuban society. Ward writes of Canadian visitors — 40,000 in 1976 — as "an absolute tourist boom." In agriculture, industry and fishing the state has realized many objectives, but is far short of self-sufficiency.

Against the obvious successes, Ward rightly notes the loss of intellectual freedom and a constant exposure to simplistic propaganda. He sees, too, the ambition of Castro as a potential liability for the future.

"He sees himself in the role of a missionary, and his message is the conversion of the entire world to Marxist-Leninist thought." Ward decided after a long interview with Castro. "He believes he has been singled out to deliver this message and lead the way to communism." That this may cancel out any hope of U.S. recognition does not seem a deterrent.

A source of much furtive complaining, it seems, is the contrast between the continuing shortages and the maintenance of a costly military operation overseas.

"People who look for a one-sentence description of Cuba will be disappointed", Ward concludes. "The country is complicated and ever-changing. Work and constant talk about the Revolution are certainly common denominators, even to the point of being tiresome. One often gets the impression that Cubans continue the incessant dialogue and propaganda barrage about the virtues of revolutionary life for fear that if they stopped the talk the Revolution might vanish. It would be unkind and inaccurate to characterize life as dreary, but the work hours are long, shortages are real, and the many activities, freedoms, and possessions that Americans consider necessary to happiness are either limited or unavailable. And yet, the typical Cuban, brimming with confidence and a healthy dose of propaganda, stands convinced he is contributing those long hours as his part of building the "New Society" and the "New Man."

Inside Cuba Today, in short, is a refreshingly objective look at a complex country, profusely illustrated with some 200 photographs by the author, and should be read by anyone who has wondered what's really happening there.

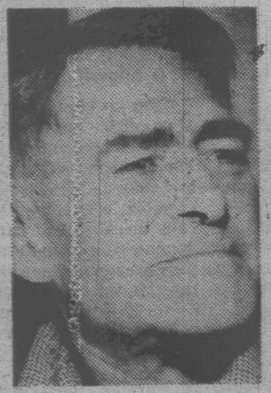
Humanity Lacking in City Artist's War Memoir

By JULIAN REID

Maxwell Bates is well known to Victorians as one of the mainstays of our local artistic community — a painter of international reputation. In A Wilderness of Days he turns to a new medium, literary autobiography, recounting his wartime experiences as a prisoner-of-war in Germany and illustrating them with 26 characteristically stark full-page drawings.



BATES
. . . not his medium

His account commences in June 1940, shortly after the Dunkirk evacuation, when Private Bates was one of the 140,000-odd British troops still left stranded in northern France. Captured by one of Erwin Rommel's triumphant panzer-divisions, his battalion was compelled to take part in the notorious three-week march during which thousands of Allied POWs slogged their way northward into Holland, where they were finally loaded on to barges and shipped inland to the waiting labor-camps of Germany.

In April 1945, after almost five years of hard physical labor in Arbeits Kommando 137, a small work-camp attached to a salt-mine in Thuringia, Bates took part in a second notorious march — the month-long ordeal of those POWs who were herded southwards into Bavaria in order (God only knows why!) to prevent them from falling into the hands of the advancing Allied forces. Finally, deep in the twitching underbelly of the overthrown Thousand-Year Reich, he was liberated by the American Seventh Army, and shipped belatedly back to his then-home, London, England.

Bates' recounting of these two grueling marches is marked throughout by his painter's eye for the slight but telling detail. But the prose in which these flashes of realistic immediacy are embedded is, alas, decidedly pedestrian — workmanlike at best, and at worst brusque and almost irritatingly perfunctory.

The book's chief flaw, however, is not this forgivable sign of amateurishness, but the heavy-handed tedium of its central sections. Here Bates turns his attention to the "wilderness of years" he spent in Arbeits Kommando 137 — "five years", by his own confession, "of which I could remember remarkably little because one day had been too like the next and they were telescoped."

True to Bates' memories in this respect, these pages are simply dull, largely unredeemed by the incidental flashes of vitality which set off the march sequences, and almost totally devoid both of incident and of any sense of individualizing character-traits among the guards or inmates. Worst still, the presentation is jumbled and unsystematic, totally shapeless and without any sense of dramatic pacing. Nor is there any perceptible sign of existential anguish or personal involvement on the author's part, whether in his own fate or that of his fellows.

It seems almost as if he passed through the entire five lengthy years in a state of somnambulistic detachment from the events in which he participated, remaining emotionally at arms-length from everything and everyone around him. Even the illustrations, the best things in the book, for the most part share in this almost reptiliany impersonal quality. And, partly for this reason, they are far from Bates at his best.

It may be that his memories have been dulled by the intervening 30-odd years or it may simply be the mark of his amateur status as a writer; but the overall impression this book leaves is very much that of a prolonged and intermittently vivid dream, rather lifelessly recounted and almost wearisomely self-centred, as dreams by their nature often are. There is in these pages an almost stifling absence of the vital essence of living humanity, either on Bates' own part or on that of his fellow-sufferers. It is as if such elementary feelings as empathy, concern, and compassion were entirely alien to this gray-tinctured world.

Still, for all its faults, A Wilderness of Days retains some passing interest, both as a footnote to history and an incidental pendant to Maxwell Bates' more substantial achievements as a painter. But viewed on its own terms, as a belated contribution to the literature of humanity, in extremis, it suffers, alas, from one crippling deficiency — when it comes to simple humanity, it has precious little to offer.

Life on Both Sides Tasted by Commuters

By ANTHONY JENKINS

The confession has come to dominate verbal arts of the late 1970s. Plays like Michel Tremblay's Marie Lou, or the Broadway musical Chorus Line, are simply a string of self-revealing monologues. God may be "dead" and the churches turned outwards towards community service, but the individual still needs to unburden himself to someone: from the couch, in group encounters or across the footlights.

American novelists have known that for years. The self-castigating monologue has on been their major mode. What Portnoy's Complaint did for Jewish angst, Wilfrid Sheed's latest novel, Transatlantic Blues, now does for post-Pope-John Catholics.

"Yes, the humble tape recorder: a talking machine with no one at the other end. You will notice (smile) that its little mouthpiece looks sort of like a confessional grille and it is dressed in black. (Smile fades) Perhaps now that we have arrogantly dismissed our other gods and sent them packing, our troubled hearts can still find something to say to the only two gods that remain: ourselves and our technology. Think about it."

There are big advantages to this mode: the vitality of the speaking voice, its flip syntax, ripe slang, private myths and symbols. It's a style that suits the American urge to break through the boundaries of tradition by leaping backwards and forwards through the memories of the narrator. In good hands — and Sheed's are — it results in wry, salty and energetic story-telling.

But the inwardly turned monologue can also bog down in mawkish soul-basking. Sheed has skated deftly around that trap by his choice of subject.

His narrator, Monty Chatworth, is part American, part British. One side of him is "so adolescently earnest, the way Americans are supposed to be . . . showing me around your latest feelings like a freshman showing off his rooms . . . Next year all the furniture will be rearranged." The other side of him is British cool, with an ear for social nuance and an eye for the ridiculous. So the novel, in digging inwards, hits outwards at the comedy of life on both sides of the Atlantic.

SHEED
. . . salty novel

Monty's family ships to America early in the last war. There young Pendrid (his real name) is determinedly English among the Irish-Italian-Americans at school. But once back in England he is suddenly American, a misfit. The family returns to the U.S.: "The very first day, I asked a cop, 'You got the time, Mac?' and he said, 'British, huh?' " Unwillingly he goes back to England and becomes a Yank-at-Oxford. Those central episodes of the novel generate neat jibes at adolescent intellectuals as well as the nationality game.

Armed with his degree, he avoids the BBC, "which sucks talent like bits of fluff into that big white building, where it's safe forever." He also extricates himself from having to take on the responsibility of the family's wilting estates by taking the only way out: back to America. There he cashes in the one thing he has to offer, a British accent, and becomes an all-night disc-jockey which leads him to an interview show, fame and pay-dirt.

So there we have Chatworth (note the name): a David Frost figure, straddling both sides of the Atlantic like a hollow Colossus. As I said, he's the paradigm of the seventies: "It's funny, if people won't go to confession, perhaps we must bring confession to them. That might be the interviewer's calling these days."

Knowing the tricks of the personality trade, since he's been assuming roles all his life, Monty chips away the shams of the famous on his talk show, only to find they have the same emptiness as he has. And so, as the book opens, he turns to Father Sony, his portable tape recorder, as the only way to reach his father confessor, his father God, or his real father, "a moustache and tobacco combination; a sandy sort of man," who he knows he's disappointed by not being "first-rate".

One real-life product of transatlantic commuterdom is Penelope Gilliatt, who spends six months of the year writing film reviews and features for the New Yorker and the other six months in Europe writing fiction. Her latest collection of short stories dips into life on both sides of the Pond.

Books of short stories habitually leave me cold. They are like eating away through one of those presentation boxes of miniature jams: a couple of spoonfuls, then on to the next. But Gilliatt's linger on the palate. I read these twice, each time with added pleasure.

Unlike the usual short story which is strategically shaped to seize a reader's attention from the first sentence and then send him away on a surprise ending, these stories creep up unobtrusively. They are like conversations overhead on a bus. As though the characters have been there all along and will go on with their lives after the final sentence.

Splendid Lives is not simply the title of the first story; it sounds the keynote to the collection. Her characters radiate an inner strength. Deserted children or bewildered young wives who strike out on their own. Working-class women who may seem browbeaten but who have an unquenchable resilience. Elderly people whose failing bodies scarcely hamper alert minds.

The "splendor" of her best characters is their gritty individuality. That's what makes eavesdropping on them so rewarding. As a character in the final story says of his wife: "One thing done right is quite enough for a lifetime, and she's done a great many more than one . . . She has an unusual capacity to get interested." Such figures share their author's quirky wit, compassion and style.

Within those limits, the novel lures one into a fantastic world of mystery, the black arts and dollops of steamy sex.

The book starts at full tilt with the disturbed diary-notes of a wedding guest. The stumbling rhythms are those of speech, but disbelief is soon squashed by the lurid happenings that disrupt the service in the chapel in leafy Virginia.

The time is 1942. The violent world outside is as nothing compared to the whirlwinds that hurl down on all the characters here. There follows an interlude in wartime Yorkshire. The same lumpen narrative, and the only difference in the dialogue is that it loses its lacing of Tennessee Williams. But again we're swept up by the weirdness, and from that point on Farris had me in the palm of his hand.

His Old South, the plantation of Dasheroons, seems but a step away from the dark forests of French Equatorial Africa. The Voodoo goddess entwines herself around both places. If "Boss" Bradwin, his two sons "Champ" and "Clipper," his wife Nhora, and their relatives, Negro servants and friends are stereotypes from stale movies, they are brought alive by the sheer power of the author's imaginings.

His gift is to make the supernatural seem more plausible than the everyday. He drops hints along the way which entice the reader on ("Hah, I've got it!") while he disappears around the corner to pull out the next big effect.

Murray's Oxford dictionary became the work of a lifetime

Caught in the Web of Words is the biography of James A. H. Murray, first editor of the Oxford English Dictionary. The author is his granddaughter, K. M. Elizabeth Murray.

The Oxford is the greatest dictionary ever compiled and it is surprising that no one has previously seen fit to write the history of such a vast undertaking. Maybe it is because the story has been related so well in outline in the Introduction to the 13-volume edition. Or maybe it is just that the Oxford is such an integral part of one's life, like a bed or a kettle, that it seemed too ordinary to bother about.

James Murray disapproved of biographies, believing that a person's work should stand as sole monument. However, it is known that he intended to write a narrative of his life and memories for his family when he finished work on the dictionary, but that day never came. And now, 60 years after his death, his granddaughter has painstakingly pieced his life together.

Mountain of notes

Miss Murray, now in her late sixties, was four when her grandfather died in 1915, and 17 when the completed dictionary finally appeared in 1928. James Murray was born in a Scottish border village in 1837 just prior to the death of King William IV and the accession of Queen Victoria. What a span of history all that represents!

Miss Murray's task, unlike that of most biographers, was not to seek out material but to reduce a mountain of it to manageable proportions. Her grandmother, who looked after all her husband's business affairs, never threw anything away, and her eldest son — Miss Murray's father — actively collected additional family material to add to the pile.

The man who was chiefly responsible for one of the greatest feats of scholarship of all time was largely self-educated. He left school at 14 because his father, the village tailor, couldn't afford to send him away for further education. Undaunted, he took casual farm work while continuing to educate himself.

The boy studied the geological structure of his district, mastered the classification of plants and — pointer to things to come — instructed himself in four languages, French, Italian, German, and Greek. At 17 he became assistant master at a village school, founded an archaeological society, "discovered" Anglo-Saxon, explored various branches of natural science, acquired a knowledge of the written form of many more languages, and embarked on a life-long study of phonetics.

When he left Scotland for London with his first wife, for the sake of her health, he took with him his prize possession, King Alfred's translation of Orosius. Surely, a brilliant academic career lay ahead for such an enthusiastic and industrious scholar. Unfortunately, there was one snag: he lacked a degree. So he was forced to settle for a lowly job in a bank, a fate that T. S. Eliot was also compelled to suffer.

Murray's wife died in 1865, but he elected to remain in London and, two years later, he remarried. Things began to take a turn for the better when he met A. J. Ellis, at that time the greatest English authority on pronunciation, and through Ellis he met the leading philologists and scholars of the day.

Just bank clerk

Incredibly, in view of his lack of professional qualifications, Murray was invited to read papers on Scottish dialects to the Philological Society, and to edit a volume for the Early English Text Society. And he was still a bank clerk — probably the most learned bank clerk of the century.

In 1870 a friend managed to get him a job as a schoolmaster, but without a degree (and therefore without a gown) he had no future. Apart from teaching and continuing his philological and dialectal work, Murray also managed to matriculate and to study for a BA degree at London University. His sole object was to qualify himself for a better teaching job, and eventually for a position as a principal. So desperate was he that he prevailed upon influential friends to short-circuit the purgatory and obtain for him an honorary doctorate from Edinburgh University.

Just when his future as a teacher seemed secure an offer came out of the blue to edit the New English Dictionary ("New" because it was the first since Johnson's pioneer work of a century earlier. The name was later changed to Oxford English Dictionary). He accepted the challenge and, first at his school and later in the garden of his house in Oxford, he built a Scriptorium, and from these improbable workshops came the greatest dictionary of modern times.

The agreement to produce the dictionary was signed in 1978 between the Philological Society and Oxford University's Clarendon Press. Murray, who was 42, estimated that the dictionary would run to 7,000 pages and would take 10 years to complete.

He was way out. It took nine years to complete Volume I (letters A and B) and Volume II, containing C, was not published until 1895, three years after the whole work should have been ready. Murray was to spend 37 years working on the dictionary, which was not completed and published until 1928, 13 years after his death. And it was to contain 16,000 pages.

As the delays increased — and the delays were all due to Murray's insistence on an historical approach and a standard of quality never before attempted, and never since achieved — more editors were added to share the load. But the finished product was essentially his because he not only planned the work but edited 50 per cent of it, with, let it be noted, the help of thousands of mostly unpaid assistants.

Throughout all the period Murray was up against it financially. He was so poorly paid that he had to mortgage his house and draw on his meagre savings. However, he must have gained some satisfaction from the honors that came his way: doctorates from dozens of universities in Britain and abroad; a knighthood; and, just before he died, a cherished doctorate from Oxford.

Miss Murray has used the treasure chests of letters and documents belonging to the Murray family, as well as the documents and minute books preserved by the Oxford University Press, to give a rounded picture of a saintly scholar and patriarch of a large and academically brilliant family (he had 11 children), as well as a detailed account of the squabbles and frustrations that preceded the birth of the dictionary.

This biography has been lavishly praised and called "beguiling", "eloquent" and (by Anthony Burgess) "one of the finest biographies of the twentieth century." I think Burgess and some other reviewers have been somewhat carried away and have confused Murray's achievement, for which no praise can suffice, with Miss Murray's work. She is retired from a splendid academic career and clearly this book has been a retirement project. She lacks the magic touch of sympathetic communication, and the book is extremely heavy going. I'll say no more.

Fighting words

Except this. The Preface, written by R. W. Burchfield (editor of the OED Supplement) opens with, "This is a biography of a lexicographer greater by far than Dr. Johnson . . .". Those are fighting words to a Johnsonian and I'll pick up the gauntlet next week when I will deal with a new biography of the great Samuel Johnson who, incidentally, would have been the first to pay homage to Murray, who typified Johnson's definition of a lexicographer as "a compiler of dictionaries, a harmless drudge."

Escapee Finds a Vision in Canadian Backwoods

By WALT KELLYTHORNE

In 1962 Thomas York — "mad and violent and driven, discontent" — left his home and his draft notice in North Carolina. He and his wife Lynn drove north, and spent their first Canadian winter in a borrowed cabin at Bartibog Sation in northern New Brunswick, their only neighbor a shell-shocked Catholic priest who lived alone in a cabin full of books — and who could manage no more than 10 minutes' conversation at a time.

At first, York says, he and Lynn didn't "tease" themselves "with the question of why we were where we were, or doing what we were doing. . . ."

Instead, Tom read Paradise Lost and studied Greek and Hebrew while Lynn explored the woods on their only pair of snowshoes. Afternoons, Tom used the shoes for long hikes through the woods. It was in those woods that he resolved to devote all his efforts to finding the "covenant of peace" proclaimed by Ezekiel; that found, Tom believed he would finally be able to "dwell securely in the wilderness and sleep in the woods."

The Yorks' second winter in a cabin they built themselves near Barrie, Ont., extended and partially fulfilled the process begun in the first. At the end of that long winter's meditation Thomas York experienced a vision that led him out of the woods and into the world again.

And Sleep In The Woods is a beautiful and funny book. Anyone who's struggled to build their own retreat, in woods or in city, will recognize the Yorks' efforts as their own — from Tom's hauling of a huge wood-burner on his back, with apologies to the beavers whose dam he walked over, to Lynn's encounter with a bear (substitute urban mugger?) who listened calmly while she sang The Teddy Bear's Picnic before it shambled away.

Throughout, the peace and beauty of the woods is skilfully evoked. Listen:

"The day began as had the days preceeding it: the neutral-toned and uneventful days when no snow fell. The dawn I greeted at my princess pine was no ruddier than usual, the morning frost no more brittle, the air no more keen. By noon, when I left to chop wood and fetch ice, the sky was beginning to curd; I could scent in the air a thickness, a closeness, as if, deprived for a season of fire and water, air was descending to earth. The blows of my ax thudded dully, without resonance. By midafternoon I was back at the cabin; the sky had turned gun-metal gray, the air chill. Even the brown upside-down bird, which clung to cedars and travelled down tree trunks all day, had flown off. The woods were dark and earthly still, the woods creatures were waiting, hidden and hushed, for what would surely pass."

In August 1973, after years of work and study which led him from suburban Toronto to the Queen Charlotte Islands and the Northwest Territories, Thomas York returned briefly to his home town of Little Rock, Ark. He stood trial there for violating the Selective Services Act, was convicted, and sentenced to three years in prison.

In the midst of that trial Tom was finally able to complete the vision begun in the Canadian woods, and to learn the secret of his — and, perhaps, anyone's — experience on this planet. It's an ancient secret whose import has too often been lost; your rediscovery of it might begin with a reading of And Sleep In The Woods.
